Victim, Officer He Accused, Death Auto and Scene of New York Tragedy

Herman Rosenthal, on the left, who was a well-known gambler, was killed after he had accused Police Lieutenant Becker, on the right, of being his partner in a gambling house in West Forty-fifth street. The resort was raided and a policeman was constantly kept on duty inside. Rosenthal declared that Becker had been guilty of bad faith with him and had promised to appear before the Grand Jury yesterday, five hours after his murder, and make a complete exposure. The murderers drove up to the Metropole in a slate-colored touring car, called Rosenthal outside and shot him to death in front of the hotel.

WHITMAN BLAMES POLICE FOR MURDER

NEW YORK, July 17.—Three men are under arrest in connection with the sensational murder of Herman Rosenthal, gambler and accuser of prominent police officials, shot down in front of the Hotel Metropole.

The grand jury investigation of the murder and of Rosenthal's charges against the police officials will open today.

Louis Libby, the first man arrested, has been positively identified by one witness, it is said, as the man who did the shooting. It has been learned he was a former associate of Rosenthal in a gambling house.

A score or more of plain clothes men were searching the city early today for several men whom District Attorney Whitman learned were connected with the shooting. After several hours of grilling, Louis Libby and William Shapiro, who owned motor car 41,313, that was used in the killing, broke down and told all they knew of the murder.

The latest arrest in Louis Webber an East Side character, better known as Bridgie Webber.

Mrs. Rosenthal, widowed by the assassin's deed, in a remarkable statement today promised full support to the efforts of District Attorney Whitman to bring the murderers to justice. She said:

The murderers made a serious mistake. They killed my husband, it is true. But I know all

Frank J. Linehan, Serving at Deer Island, Appeals for Pardon

Former Senator Frank J. Linehan, who is serving two years in the House of Correction at Deer Island for larceny from the city of Boston, filed a petition today with Governor Foss asking for a pardon. Governor Foss referred the petition to the council, but as the papers were lacking, especially one from District Attorney Pelletier, the case went over until the next meeting. Linehan was arrested last December in New Orleans after he had defaulted his bail in the Superior Court. He pleaded guilty when arraigned. Linehan has been in prison about six months.

Bracelet Lost by Mrs. Ellis Found by Newport Boy

NEWPORT, R. I., July 17.—A lost diamond and sapphire bracelet, valued at $1,500, was restored to Mrs. Ralph N. Ellis of New York today. Mrs. Ellis, a chum of Alice Roosevelt Longworth, is visiting Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and lost the bracelet last Sunday. David T. Stewart, the twelve-year-old son of Richard Stewart, gardener for Charles L. Baker, found the bracelet and is $100 richer. He found it lying in the road and took it to his mother. She thought it was a cheap trifle and put it behind an old kitchen clock. Nothing more was thought of it until a notice in a paper offered a reward of $100.

South Boston Man Is Fined for Killing Two Canary Birds

John J. Joyce was fined $20 by Judge Fallon in South Boston District Court today for cruelty to animals in killing two canaries owned by Thomas J. Mahoney, who lives over Joyce at No. 23 Rawson street, South Boston.

During the hot spells Mahoney hung the bird cages in the airshaft so the little songsters could be cooler. Joyce complained the cages shut off his light and air, also that the birds were dirty.

Harvey L. Fuller, agent of the M. S. P. C. A., who prosecuted the case, put the Mahoney family on the stand. They testified that Joyce reached up the airshaft with a pole, whacked the cages and knocked them from the hooks so that they fell thirty-five feet to the bottom of the shaft. One bird was killed outright. The other died soon.

STRANGE DEATH IN AN ELEVATOR

Harry Powers, a young elevator operator in the Colonial building, No. 100 Boylston street, was found dying at the bottom of his elevator well shortly before noon today, under circumstances so mysterious police headquarters has started an investigation.

Powers was twenty-one years old, single, and lived at No. 5 Brooks avenue, Dorchester.

A few minutes before noon Floorman Driscoll, who has charge of the elevators, heard a crash from the direction of the shaft where Powers' car travels. The car was up somewhere in the top of the shaft.

Driscoll looked into the well and saw Powers on the bottom, unconscious, but breathing. The young man died on the way to the hospital. The police have given out no statement of the cause of death, pending an examination of the body by the medical examiner. The presumption was, however, that the young man died from the fall.

The car was found at the tenth floor. There were no witnesses to the accident. If it was an accident. Elevator inspectors said the car was in proper condition.

HIGGINS REFUSES TO TAKE RUSSELL CASE BEFORE GRAND JURY, YET AWHILE

District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex notified William R. Scharton, counsel for Dakota Dan, by letter today that the Russell case will not be presented to the Grand Jury, at least not while it is being heard before a master. Mr. Higgins does not deem it fitting the District Attorney or Grand Jury should interfere" in what might be claimed to be an attempt to aid one side or the other."

The letter follows:

Dear Sir—Your communication of July 13, 1912, demanding that I "as public prosecutor for the County of Middlesex shall make full and complete investigation of the case known as Daniel Blake Russell vs. the estate of Daniel Russell," received and contents duly noted.

It appears that the case is now being heard by G. A. A. Pevey, Esq., as

FRESNO DAN'S PLAN TO SHARE ESTATE

Fresno Dan Russell admitted today that he had agreed to give Fresno lawyers one-eighth of his share of the Russell estate if there were no contest, and one-third if his claim was contested. He admitted that these lawyers, Cartwright and Odlin, have been paid $3,000 by the present Russell estate for their services so far in identifying him and in bringing him East to present his claim.

The Fresno claimant was grilled again today by Attorney William R. Scharton, counsel for Dakota Dan, when the hearing was resumed at East Cambridge before Gilbert A. A. Pevey as master.

Fresno Dan said that he had only $16 in his pocket at the time he saw in the Fresno papers that Daniel Blake Russell was wanted. He went to the Fresno police station. The police put him in touch with Attorney Cartwright.

He admitted having been arrested in San Francisco as a vagrant, though he had $360 at the time.

He admitted having lived under the name of Anderson, then changing his name to Johnson in 1900 because he liked the latter name better.

Attorney Scharton would question him about his wanderings. Then the attorney

CITY HALL ELEVATOR DROPS A FLOOR AND THEN STICKS FAST

The east elevator at City Hall went on its regular weekly strike today, dropped a floor, and stuck between the first and second stories, scaring the operator, John Sheridan, aboard alone. Last Saturday the west elevator dropped a floor, stuck, then fell to the basement, where the frightened passengers clambered out. The elevators probably will be given a thorough overhauling.

$5,000 JAUNTING CAR FOR COUNTESS

DUBLIN, July 17.—The Countess of Suffolk has found a new sensation. During a recent visit to the Leopardstown races she had her first experience with an Irish jaunting car, and at once placed an order with a car manufacturer, with instructions that the car was to be fitted out in a style hitherto unequalled. It will cost $5,000. The Countess formerly was Miss Margaret Leiter of Chicago.

CONFIRM ENWRIGHT AS LOWELL JUDGE

The Governor's Council today confirmed the appointment of Thomas J. Enwright by Governor Foss to the judgeship of the Lowell police court. Enwright, a prominent lawyer of Lowell, will succeed Judge Hadley, resigned, who had been judge thirty years. The appointment of Judge Enwright had been before the council for nearly eight months, being tabled at previous meetings without much discussion.

WOMAN STRIKER IS SENT TO JAIL

NEW BEDFORD, July 17.—Judge Milliken adjudged Sophie O'Gara, a striker, of being guilty of disturbing the peace and of assault on an officer in New Bedford District Court today, and sentenced her to six months in the House of Correction on each count. This was a total sentence of one year for the woman.

Antone Camara, striker, was given the same sentence for disturbing the peace and for assault on a girl operative. Two other men were sentenced.

The woman was arraigned on the charge of assault on an officer and disturbing the peace. Both men were charged with disturbing the peace.

Frank J. Andrade, striker, was given six months in the House of Correction for disturbing the peace.

Peter Lampara, striker, was fined $20 for obstructing the sidewalk.

The four defendants were arrested earlier in the day in the first disorder since the strike began.

Judge Milliken said, in passing sentence:

"It is just such acts as these that take away the sympathy of the public from those who are in need of it and which lead

DEAN NAMED FOR EXCISE BOARD

Governor Foss sent to the Executive Council at 11 o'clock today the appointment of Associate Justice Josiah S. Dean of South Boston District Court, who lives in Brighton, to succeed Ezra H. Baker, as a member of the Licensing Board for the city of Boston.

The appointment is for a six-year term at an annual salary of $3,500.

The Governor picked Judge Dean from twenty candidates. One of the strongest was thought to be Robert A. Woods, the settlement worker. He was indorsed by President Lowell of Harvard, Bishop Lawrence and other prominent men.

The Governor designated Commissioner Samuel H. Hudson to be chairman of the

$1,000 DAMAGE IN DOWNTOWN FIRE

Fire early today in the four-story office building at the corner of Oliver and Franklin streets caused $1,000 damage. The fire started on the fourth floor, occupied by the Union Engraving Company.

WON'T SENTENCE MITCHELL YET

WARRINGTON, July 17.—Justice Wright in the District Supreme Court today refused to sentence John Mitchell, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, because Mitchell's agreement to be sentenced in his absence was not in the form desired by the court.

DANIEL J. KILEY SUES TRUSTEE OF BREWERY

Daniel J. Kiley entered a suit today in the Suffolk Superior Court for $40,000 against Charles W. H. Frederick, Frederick & trustee of the Burkhardt Brewing Company. Kiley claims a breach of contract in the alleged failure to transfer stock.

HAVERHILL SHOE WORKERS QUIT AND PARADE STREETS

HAVERHILL, July 17.—Three hundred shoe workers struck today when their demand for better wages, shorter hours and recognition of their new Block Cutters' Union was refused. Starting from the River street factories, the strikers gathered numbers as they walked through the shoe district to Socialist Hall.

Patrolmen notified the station of the progress of the strikers through the street, but no attempt was made to halt them.

KAISER BEATEN IN RACE FOR "ARIADNE"

BERLIN, July 17.—The Kaiser has been beaten in his race for the honor of producing Richard Strauss' new opera "Ariadne," at the Royal Opera House. With the kings of Saxony and Wurtemberg he offered money and decorations to secure the honor. The King of Wurtemberg won, with the highest bid.

LUCE CANDIDATE FOR PRESENT POST

Lieutenant-Governor Robert M. Luce, the man who refused to allow the striking Lynn men to enter the State House, announced today that he would not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, but would be a candidate for renomination to his present office.

GET A SUSPECT IN CONNERS CASE

NAUGATUCK, Ct., July 17.—A man who says he is Victor Lezoli, No. 1339 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, is being held here on suspicion that he is Nathan Schwartz, wanted for the murder of Julia Conners of New York. It is said he resembles the missing man.

PRINCIPAL CHARACTERS IN RUSSELL CASE

would jump back to details of Fresno Dan's early life in Melrose, questioning him sharply of his boyhood memories.

Fresno Dan remembered Kate Clancy. He said that, although she is his next-door neighbor in Melrose, he has not called on her.

Attorney Scharton: "You know, don't you, that Kate Clancy says you are a fake?"

Fresno Dan: "Yes. I've understood she favors the other man."

The witness was unable to remember where he was in 1902-3 and 4.

District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex, in which county the Russell case is now being tried, notified William H. Scharton, Dakota Dan's counsel, by letter today that he does not intend to present the Russell case to the Middlesex Grand Jury. The District Attorney declines because he deems that the rights of Dakota Dan are being fully protected.

CLEMENT L. POLLOCK'S STORY OF THE GREAT WILL CONTEST

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

The front row of the spectators' seats in the East Cambridge Court was filled at 9:15 a. m. today. It was a cheerful crowd of women. There was one exception—a small gray man with gold-rimmed spectacles.

They had come to see Fresno Dan played. Fresno Dan says he is Daniel Blake Russell—swears to it. Sitting in another part of the room, smiling and showing white teeth, Dakota Dan watched his rival for half of the Russell estate.

Dakota Dan swears that he is Daniel Blake Russell. It is a novel fight, in or out of the papers or fiction, or on the melodrama boards.

One of Them a Fraud.

One of the men is a fraud—a perjurer! What sublime audacity!

For he must feel every moment that someone will stalk forth and, pointing the finger of truth at him, declare:

"You are an impostor. The mask is off."

If our friend Munsterberg of Harvard really has a machine that will detect a liar in the act, here is an alluring opportunity for him to test it.

It would be startling, wouldn't it, if the truth-telling instrument should indicate that neither one of the Duns is the real Dan?

Fresno Dan, so far, hasn't fared well as a prodigal. There has been no fatted calf for him and barely enough for a beef stew.

Senator Daniel Russell, the father of one of the claimants, has been dead more than five years. He left half a million. Half of that at 4 per cent. interest is $10,000 a year. And yet Fresno Dan has been compelled to live on $20 a week, or on about $1,200 for the two years he has been here.

There ought to be a pile of money for the real Dan, if he ever proves who he is.

One man told me today that he thought the estate is worth nearly a million dollars by this time.

The front row of onlookers is cheerful. They are friends of Dakota Dan.

A little gray man is sure Dakota Dan is the real one.

"Why, he used to come into my store," he said. "He used to sit in the seat in church in front of me. He reminded me of one incident I had forgotten that happened when he was a boy—and it happened, too. He could not have faked it."

Has New Witnesses.

It appears that Dakota Dan has dug up a lot of new witnesses, and that they are going to the front for him this time like an army.

Another woman comes in and joins the front-benchers. She is in blue with a green tuft of ribbon in her hair. She smiles and shakes hands.

Another, slender, in brown and very attractive and vivacious, joined the Dakota Dan party. They chat and laughed and showed confidence.

Gilbert A. A. Perry, the master, is the one directly connected with the hearing to appear. It is 9:50. He is a quiet, undemonstrative man. He takes up a newspaper and turns to the Russell case.

Dakota Dan walked in a few minutes later. He nodded a smile at his friends in court. Then he joined William R. Scharton and Joseph H. McNally, his counsel. Mrs. Coombs, a slender little woman in brown, gives them some points.

Fresno Dan wore a new tie today. It is a four-in-hand and is white. Before he entered the courtroom he sat bareheaded a few minutes on the steps and allowed the faint breeze to play through his scanty hair.

The courtroom was well filled when the clock boomed out ten. It was delightfully cool. Through the open windows came the chatter of birds. It was a sort of high soprano to the heavier monotone of the chatter in the courtroom.

One of the young men looking for pictures asked a Dakota Dan adherent to pose.

"I'd rather have five or six teeth pulled," was the reply. "I am loyal, but I don't want my face in the newspaper."

Lawyer Odlin Appears.

William Odlin, Fresno Dan's personal counsel, walked into court. It was his first appearance. He wears glasses with black whalebone trimmings. He talked with Ferdinand B. Almy, one of the executors of the Russell will.

"Scharton missed his train," he reports. "The trains run only every half hour where he lives."

District Attorney Higgins walked in. He chatted with Master Percy. It was not about the Russell case.

"Hey, John," remarked Lawyer Odlin. "This is not a political rally."

"The women with the lilac hat
Came in with skirt a-rustle,
When time arrives to come to bat
She'll boost Dakota Russell.

Mr. Scharton got in at 10:35. He explained that he had missed his train. Fresno Dan was called. Scharton questioned him.

"Did you ever use the name of Dan?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"Any other name will do just as well."

"Any other name would be just as sweet to you," paraphrased Scharton.

"Called Him Dannie."

"Did you have any objection to Dan Johnson?"

"No, I didn't like that name."

"They called you Dan twenty-three years, didn't they?"

"They called me Dannie," replied Dan. "Dan sounds natural now."

Fresno Dan said that other names were just as convenient to him. He thought "John" Anderson sounded better than "Dan" Anderson.

"How did you come to strike on the name of Henry in connection with Johnson?"

"I just happened upon it," replied Fresno Dan.

Mr. Odlin butted in. He wanted to know what Mr. Scharton wanted to prove.

"Who are you?" asked Scharton haughtily.

"My name is Odlin. I'm attorney for the witness."

"Attorney of record?" blandly asked Scharton.

It appeared not, and Master Percy decided Lat Odlin should not answer the question.

Mr. Odlin sat down. Then Mr. Scharton went at Fresno Dan as to how Mr. Odlin got into the case. Fresno Dan said Mr. Cartwright was paid $2,000 and that Mr. Odlin was paid $1,000.

"Who paid it?"

"The Russell estate."

Hesitated in "Brother."

Fresno Dan said he knew about the payment of this $3,000, because he had seen the receipts at the Russell home in Melrose.

"The money was paid by my—by William C. Russell," said Fresno Dan.

"Why did you hesitate on my— why didn't you say 'my brother?'"

"I thought it was polite to say William C. Russell."

"How many brothers have you?"

"Just one."

"What was this money paid for?"

"Expenses in bringing me from the West."

"What else did Mr. Cartwright do?"

"He helped me locate me."

"What did Mr. Odlin do?"

"He helped also to identify me."

"Is Mr. Odlin your counsel now?"

"Yes."

"Do you expect to pay him?"

"Yes, when the case is settled. I don't know when it will be settled—it is uncertain."

Fresno Dan made the startling admission that he signed a contract in Fresno with Lawyer Cartwright to pay him one-third of his share of the Russell estate if there was a contest, and one-eighth if there was not for his help in the case.

"Do you expect to pay Cartwright one-eighth of your share?"

"I don't know—he may not abide by the contract. He said he might be in some different arrangement."

"Mr. Cartwright and Mr. Odlin may have some other arrangement, may they not?" asked Scharton.

"They may have," replied Fresno Dan.

It appeared that Fresno Dan has had little to do with any legal or money arrangements. That has all been done for him. It was brought out that when Fresno Dan first saw Cartwright in Fresno that he was needed as an heir, he had between $18 and $19 in cash. He went to the police and they sent him to Lawyer Cartwright. He said he signed the contract with Cartwright because he thought the folks at home wouldn't know him.

"Why not?"

"Because I'd been away so long."

"You haven't changed much, have you, except in age?"

"No, only in age."

Fresno Dan's Pictures.

Fresno Dan's pictures were then taken up. He said he had no pictures taken since he was ten years old. Mr. Odlin showed him a picture of Daniel Blake Russell taken at five years of age, he said.

"What did Mr. Odlin tell you? He said that was a picture of Daniel Blake Russell, didn't he?"

"Yes, he——"

Then Fresno Dan changed the answer. He said Mr. Odlin asked him if it was a picture of him.

"I said it looked like me when a boy," testified Fresno Dan.

Fresno Dan could not recall any of the details of the picture taking. He could recall nothing about his clothing. He had a photograph taken at ten, but could recall no details about it.

"That was my last picture," said Fresno Dan.

When asked about Melrose photographers he could not remember any. He said over and over again:

"I don't remember—I don't remember."

"Were you ever photographed by force?" asked Scharton, suddenly.

"No, I never had my picture in the Rogue's Gallery."

"Why did you say that?"

"I thought that was what you meant."

Fresno Dan declared his picture was never in any Rogue's Gallery. His fingerprints were never taken, he said. He said he was arrested in Fresno and in San Francisco.

"Why were you arrested in San Francisco?"

"For vagrancy."

"Did you have any money?"

"Yes, $295."

This brought a gasp from the spectators. The answer surprised Scharton.

"Why were you arrested?"

"The police simply nabbed me."

"Didn't like your face and nabbed you?"

"They nabbed me."

Liked Small Hotels.

Fresno Dan said he worked in a small mining town in California in 1900. He had been known before this as Anderson. But he changed his name to Johnson in 1900.

"Why did you switch your name?" Scharton asked.

"Anderson sounded too much like a Swede."

"Isn't Johnson a Swedish name?"

"Well, there are Americans by that name."

Fresno Dan explained he had lost his $295. He gambled some, he said.

"What kind of gambling?"

"Played the races."

"Chased the ponies, eh?"

"Yes."

Fresno Dan was at Stockton at the time of the big San Francisco fire. He said he stopped at the St. Francis in Oakland. The proprietor didn't ask his name. It was a medium sized hotel. He didn't like hotels so big.

Fresno Dan testified that he worked on a ranch at Stockton two or three weeks.

"You were not much of a cowboy, were you?"

"No, I did haying.

"What kind of hay did you cut, alfalfa?"

"No, timothy."

"How did the timothy smell?"

"Like hay."

"Any difference between timothy and alfalfa?"

"Alfalfa is stronger, more pronounced."

Attorney Scharton brought Fresno Dan back to Melrose and asked about hay cutting at home in 1885. He said they cut hay in the lowlands which he described as a pasture.

"They don't cut hay in a pasture, do they?" asked Attorney Scharton.

"Well, they called it a pasture then."

"Is there a Russell street in Melrose?"

"Yes, I think there is now."

"Was there a Russell street in Melrose in 1885?"

"No."

"Would you be surprised to learn that there was a Russell street in Melrose in 1885?"

"Yes, I would be surprised."

Fresno Dan could only recall the name of one man who worked for his father in haying time. He said it was a Mr. Clancy, the father of Kate Clancy, whose name he gave yesterday with that of other girls he claims to have known in his boyhood.

Has Made No Calls.

"Have you called on Kate Clancy since you came back?"

"No."

"You haven't called, although her house is next to the stone wall?"

"No."

"Isn't the reason you haven't called because she failed to recognize you?"

"No. I have not called on anybody."

"Don't you know that Kate Clancy has called you a fake?"

"I heard something like that. I know she is in favor of the other man."

"Don't you know that all the girls whose names you gave yesterday are against you?"

"No, I don't that they are."

Scharton tried to get from Fresno Dan the name of someone for whom he worked in California. The witness claimed he worked on several ranches, but could not recall the names of the owners or the bosses. When pressed hard he recalled the name of Cy Morang, boss in a railroad camp, who he did not think would remember him, and Woods brothers, who had a ranch on Roberts Island, south of Stockton. He said he could not remember the boss's name on Woods' ranch.

Attorney Scharton asked him if any at the ranch now could identify him by letter. He said he was afraid not, as so many employes came and went.

Memory Fails Him.

Fresno Dan was unable to remember where he worked in 1902-3 and 4. He said he was living then in San Francisco but had only what money he had made on the ranch earlier and was doing no work.

"You appear to have been lost entirely in the year 1902 and 1903, too, for that matter. You appear to have had an entire lapse of memory. Now let us see when you found yourself.

"Was anyone paying you board in 1902?"

"No, nobody was paying my board."

The public may have got a mischoncception of just what had been done legally in this unprecedented fight. After a trial that lasted over six months it was decided that Fresno Dan, "Dakota Dan," who declared he was the rightful heir, had not proved it.

Accepted Fresno Dan.

The court did not decide that "Dakota Dan" is, as he claims to be, but simply that he had not shown himself to be Daniel Blake Russell. And as to the other claimant, "Fresno Dan," no court has decided anything about him.

William C. Russell, who never left Melrose, but stuck to home so closely that he was regarded by some as a recluse, accepted Fresno Dan as his long lost brother. He made a public statement to that effect. But Fresno Dan, until the present hearing before Master Percy, has not put himself on record under oath as declaring that he is the rightful heir to the fortune.

The importance of understanding this point is this—that now that these two men have sworn they are Daniel Blake Russell, and that as that is a human impossibility, one of them is a perjurer and is liable to criminal prosecution.

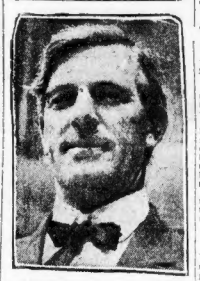
Which is the guilty man?

I studied both of the claimants and the third member of the remarkable trio, but could come to no conclusion as to which is the fraud and if I had I should not venture to tell at this stage of the proceedings.

"FRESNO DAN"

"Fresno Dan," whose varied experiences since the day he claimed to have left his home in Melrose, are being told for the first time. He is now living in Melrose and has been accepted by William C. Russell as his long lost brother. He has been telling the court of his wanderings in the West since he left home. Lawyer Scharton has given him a grilling cross-examination.

DAKOTA DAN.



"Dakota Dan" is the original claimant to a share in the Russell fortune. He has been waging a battle for three years. The respondents claim he is James Ruscan, of Messina, N. Y. Dakota Dan has spent $30,000 in the fight and has compelled the Russell estate to spend $200,000.

HATTIE KEITH

Miss Hattie Keith was "Dakota" Dan's boyhood chum. She said so on the witness stand at the first hearing in the Probate Court. Although he married another, Miss Keith declares she still has enough regard for the friendship of bygone days to be loyal to the Dakota claimant. Miss Keith says she doesn't know Fresno Dan.

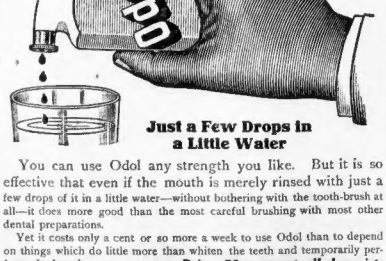
How Odol Refreshes the Mouth After Exercise or Motoring

ODOL-IZING does for the mouth what a shower-bath does for the body. It cleanses, cools and refreshes. And the refreshing and purifying power of Odol remains active for hours after you use it.

It's great after tennis or golf or any exercise, and after motoring over hot and dusty roads. It cleanses clear back into the throat—clears the way to the lungs—makes the breathing better.

Odol is the most delightful and thorough mouth antiseptic and germicide ever discovered. It is in liquid form—reaches and purifies all the hard-to-get-at places which tooth pastes and powders utterly shirk.



Just a Few Drops in a Little Water

You can use Odol any strength you like. But it is so effective that even if the mouth is merely rinsed with just a few drops of it in a little water—without bothering with the tooth-brush at all—it does more good than the most careful brushing with most other dental preparations.

Yet it costs only a cent or so more a week to use Odol than to depend on things which do little more than whiten the teeth and temporarily perfume the breath. Price, 50 cents at all druggists

J. A. Chaloner Asks Congress to Impeach Judge John C. Holt

RICHMOND, Va., July 17.—John Armstrong Chaloner today took steps to carry his fight for the possession of his property to the lower branch of Congress, and in a document numbering 250 pages, will appeal to each member of the House of Representatives for justice and demand the impeachment of Judge John C. Holt of the southern district of New York, charging him with malfeasance in office, the charges bein glossed on Judge Holt's refusal to obey the mandate of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which ruled in Chaloner's favor.

Judge Holt, the petition states, threw the case out of court and placed Chaloner in the position of a supplicant who must wait three years outside the doors of justice.

"For fifteen years I have had nothing but misery," said Mr. Chaloner today. "I have been more maligned and persecuted than even Dreyfus. I was unlawfully placed in an asylum by means of false swearing of my two brothers."

PIN IN LIVER 20 YEARS; FATAL AT LAST

BROOKLYN, July 17.—Miss Katherine Roche is dead at Brooklyn in the Prospect Heights Hospital, and a surgical examination into the cause of her mysterious illness revealed the fact that for twenty years a small pin had been in her liver.

Whitman Draws Revolver on Crowd at Wedding

Boston Man and $10,000,000 Bride Off to Hawaii to Spend Honeymoon.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—Malcolm Douglas Whitman, attorney, of New York and Boston, and his bride, who was Jennie Adeline Crocker, California's $10,000,000 heiress, today prepared to leave for the Hawaiian Islands, where their honeymoon will be spent. But the bride was minus her bouquet and her wedding finery was rumpled and soiled from the clutches of the mob that gathered outside the church.

None of the traditional old shoes or rice were thrown after the couple as they left the church. Mr. Whitman put a check to any such activity when he suddenly drew a revolver, as a group of newspaper photographers prepared to "snap" the bride and himself. Photographers and crowd scattered.

A heavy police guard surrounded the church, as there had been rumors of threats against the bride's life. But the police were powerless to hold back the throng, and when Miss Crocker arrived, souvenir hunters made a rush and plucked and tore at her veil and gown and bouquet. She was sadly rumpled before she reached the church door.

Many Boston people were among the 300 society folk who witnessed the wedding in the quaint little church of St. Matthew at San Mateo. Bishop Nichols assisted by the Rev. Dr. Cambridge of San Mateo, officiated. Mr. Whitman and his bride left in the Crocker auto and hurried to board their private car for Castle Crag, the Crocker Summer home in the Shasta Mountains. The bridegroom wore a straw hat to and from church instead of the usual silk tile.

Whitman is a widower, his wife, Jonetta McCook, a niece of Charles B. Alexander of New York, having died two years ago.

NOTABLE FEATURES IN WEDDING OF MISS CROCKER TO WHITMAN

Three thousand outside the church mobbed the bridal party and tore the bride's bouquet to shreds.

Moving pictures were taken of the ceremony by the bride's direction.

The bridegroom drew a revolver on the crowd outside the church.

The bridegroom wore a straw hat instead of the usual silk tile.

One suitor, thought to be insane, was jailed a few days before the wedding.

The bride received threatening notes.

Guests at the wedding wore $1,500,000 worth of jewels.

The bride is heir to $10,000,000.

The wedding gifts are worth $50,000.

Miss Crocker's Bouquet Torn to Shreds By Souvenir Hunters At Church.

He is the father of two children, both living. Miss Crocker and the late Mrs. Whitman were chums, Miss Crocker having been a bridesmaid at her wedding six years ago.

After their visit to the Hawaiian Islands, Mr. and Mrs. Whitman will go to New York to make their home. The wedding gifts are of untold value and a corps of detectives was retained to protect the bride from possible cranks and the wedding gifts from thieves.

Children Appeal to Missing Father to Return Home

This pathetic letter was received by the AMERICAN today:

Editor the AMERICAN:

Will the man that left his four small children Sunday, in a Boston suburb, come home if he sees this. His little K keeps asking for him constantly, making his wife feel worse every day. She is very ill. The children keep asking if this is Wednesday. Papa knows what that means. If papa is in New York, or any other place, hunting work, would he please write and make us a little happier, and come on or send to us afterwards. Rather him home without work or a penny, than home without him.

Mamma and K look on every car. If he would only see this and come home, children and mamma would be so happy. Baby Merton will be always looking. Papa, think of that.

ONLY THREE DAYS MORE
To Clean Up $70,000.00 Shoe Stock

=40= SUMMER STREET

REMEMBER—This is the most phenomenal shoe selling that Boston has ever heard of—The crowds that we had at our store last Thursday, Friday and Saturday were the greatest that ever attended any shoe sale in the history of the retail shoe business—but you know that a $70,000 shoe stock cannot all be sold in a single week—consequently deeper cuts will be made to clean up the stock this week—Thursday, Friday and Saturday will finish this great sale. Come early—some of these items we will not guarantee to have after Friday noon.

The public may well believe the frantic appeals of the merchants of this city who are endeavoring to raise money by selling their merchandise at terribly reduced prices. I for one am not afraid to confess that never before in my business life have I found it necessary to sell my stock at such ruinously low prices to raise enough cash to meet my obligations. I am in the same boat with the other merchants who suffered terribly through the horrible Spring and early Summer weather. Stock that usually sold quickly in the season simply piled up on my shelves until now I have to sell it at a loss that wipes out my usual year's profit. The blockading of my side of Summer Street by the building of the new Filene store was an additional handicap that I, together with a few other merchants on this street, was obliged to suffer. Sidewalk obstructions of the new building no longer exist; the streets are now clear to attend my big Sale. I am conducting the greatest shoe sale Boston ever saw. The finest models of the year for men, women and children have been CUT TO FACTORY COST AND LESS. I MUST HAVE $30,000 CASH FROM THE PUBLIC IMMEDIATELY OR FACE RUIN! Cash is all that will save me, and I am making the supreme effort of my life TO MAKE YOU COME AND BUY.

GRILL FRESNO DAN ON TRAVELS

Once Arrested for Vagrancy, but Had $395 in His Pocket.

question as one of the heirs to the Russell estate, sits grim and unperturbed.

So far as I could discern there was no indication of affection in any one of the three men for any other one of them. If they could not prove relationship by recollection, by witnesses, by scars, by resemblances or any other evidence such as has been produced, there certainly was nothing of the occult to assist them, as far as it showed on the surface.

Scene of Strange Hearing.

The courtroom is in one of the wings of the old building. It is on the ground floor with one side facing a narrow street, and the other a grass plot between sections of the red structure. The room is airy and cheerful. The furniture is of oak—the judge's bench, the tables and the seats of the same material. The reddish-brown effect is carried out on the walls.

Behind the judge's bench on the wall is a small calendar. On the calendar is a picture of Perry on his ship, and he is represented as writing his famous dispatch:

"We have met the enemy and they are ours."

At one side of the room is an inverted glass jar of water with a half dozen paper drinking cups.

In through the open windows the sunshine flashes. It falls on the face of a wholesome looking woman in the front row of spectators. She wears a gray dress, skirt and a white waist. On her head is a straw hat, trimmed with old rose flowers. She wears eye-glasses, and across her bosom gleams two threads of gold that stretch to her watch at her belt. The sun strikes her eye-glasses and she moves uneasily. She recrosses her hands in her lap. A fly, unswatted, lights on her nose. But she sits, facing the judge's bench, unmoved.

She Sleeps!

Is the lady dead to everything but the absorbing revelations of Dakota Dan? She is dead to the world, for the soothing, somnolent influences of the heat have wafted her into the land of dreams. Her eyes are closed. She sleeps!

The audience is made up mostly of elderly people. Most of the on-lookers are women. They have the clean look and the creamy complexion of the old New Englander—the old-time Yankee.

Mrs. Mary Murray was there. She is dressed in severe black. One of the reporters had seen her at the previous hearing. He asked her about it.

"Yes," she replied proudly. "I was at Dakota Dan's trial for six months and twenty days. I just couldn't miss it."

A grizzled man, with brick-red complexion, sat eating his luncheon in the little restaurant near the court house at the noon recess. Some newspaper men entered.

"Say," asked the gaunt, "who's that young fellow that's askin' Fresno Dan questions?"

"That's Dakota Dan's new lawyer, Mr. Scharton," he was told.

"Gosh," he replied, "I wouldn't git up afore that mix for a couple o' years."

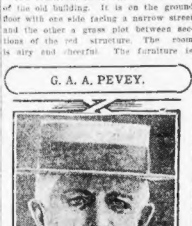
He continued eating. Then addressing the reporters again, he asked:

"Is he a Republican or a Democrat?"

"Democrat," one of the boys ventured.

"Does that make any difference?"

"Sure," he replied. "Everything politics now-a-days—why up where I came from at Fitchburg, Mc., the Republicans and Democrats were so bitterly divided they used to hold two Fourth of July celebrations."



G. A. A. PEVEY.

Gilbert A. A. Pevey was appointed master by Justice Braley of the Supreme Court. Master Pevey is the former city solicitor of Cambridge. The hearing was assigned to go on before him last week, but "Dakota Dan" sought a delay. Attorney Scharton for "Dakota Dan" has filed a motion with the Supreme Court asking that Master Pevey be removed.

STRIKE-BREAKERS AT SEA TURN PIRATES

PARIS, July 17.—Strike-breaking seamen on the mail steamer Provence, bound for Rio de Janeiro, attempted to turn pirates on the high seas, according to cable advices. When the vessel had been some days at sea the strike-breakers appeared on deck with revolvers and threatened the passengers with death if they did not do the bidding of the men's leaders. The officers armed themselves and used the marksmen into submission. They then were put in irons.

RABBI COMING TO LEAD MEAT STRIKE

The Rev. M. Abramson, who conducted the recent kosher meat strike in St. Louis, has volunteered to come to Boston and take charge of the strike. His offer will be considered at a meeting tonight. The rabbi stated that he could be of special service in establishing co-operative meat shops, in which he has had much experience in St. Louis.

MOTHER SEES SON RUN OVER BY AUTO

With his mother looking on from a short distance, Walter Johnson, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson of Main street, Waltham, was knocked down by an automobile owned and operated by Henry Cooper of Newton street, Weston, sustaining injuries which may prove fatal. Cooper claims the lad ran in front of his car.

WOMEN SHERLOCKOS CAUSE ARREST OF 2

Two women saw two men rob a drunken man in a doorway. They trailed the robbers till they met a policeman. Today Frederick Rogers of Lexington street, East Boston, and Frank J. Carr of Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, were arraigned charged with the theft.

special master to hear the parties, find the facts and decide the cases and make report to the court. It does not appear to me while the case is being heard on its merits in the proper tribunal that it would be illiting or just that the district attorney or the grand jury should interfere in what might be claimed to be an attempt to add one side or the other, nor should the expense of proving or disproving the identity of the claimant be assumed or thrust upon the County Middlesex.

In the course of theinvestigation, the master or court in their opinion find a witness "so testified as to create a reasonable presumption that he has committed perjury," he may be committed or required to recognize with sureties for his appearance to answer to an indictment for perjury.

You are undoubtedly familiar with the provisions of the Revised Laws, Chapter 210, Section 4 and 5, which I quote herewith for you.

Section 4.—"If it appears to a court of record that a party or a witness who has been legally sworn and examined, or has made an affidavit, in any proceeding, in a court or courts of justice, has so testified as to create a reasonable presumption that he has committed perjury therein, the court may forthwith commit him or may require him to recognize with sureties for his appearance to answer to an indictment for perjury, and thereupon the witnesses, to establish such perjury, may, if present, be bound over to the superior court and notice of the proceedings shall forthwith be given to the district attorney."

"Section 5. If perjury is reasonably presumed, as aforsaid, papers, books or documents which have been produced and which are considered necessary to be used on a prosecution for such perjury, may by an order of the court be detained from the person who produced them so long as may be necessary for their use in such prosecution."

It seems to me that the right of all parties are carefully guarded and protected by these provisions. If the master or the court should act in accordance with these provisions, you may rest assured that the district attorney and the grand jury will try to do their "solemn duty."

ICE FOR WATER USED TO COOL OFF BEER, FIREMEN COMPLAIN

NORFOLK, Va., July 17.—The firemen on the United States collier Vulcan, through Agent Bales, complain that the ice that should have been used to cool off their water was used to ice beer that was sold them for fifteen cents a bottle, five cents in advance of the price ashore.

They claim, also, the food served them was tainted. Their complaint will be forwarded to Washington for investigation.

MRS. ELLIS LOSES DIAMOND BRACELET

NEWPORT, R. I., July 17.—If a missing diamond and sapphire bracelet is returned at once there will be no questions asked, according to an "ad" in a local paper. Mrs. Ralph N. Ellis of New York, who is the guest of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, with Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, on a yachting trip on board the North Star, lost the gems.

MADMAN CHAINED 20 YEARS IN HOME

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 17.—An insane man, who has been a prisoner in chains for twenty years in his home in Indiana, Pa., was shipped to the Dixmont Asylum in a rough pine box. He was bound with ropes, wore no clothing and with uncut beard and hair was like a wild animal. His father's death revealed his plight.

EILLS TO QUIT THE MINISTRY

CHICOPEE, July 17.—The Rev. John Ellis, who came into the limelight as a result of his marital troubles and the fight of his wife for the custody of their five-year-old daughter, Olga Natalie Ellis, has made it plain that he does not intend to remain as pastor of the local Unitarian Church. In a letter to the clerk of the church he says he will not reconsider his resignation and that the church must at once begin to look for another pastor.

Friends of Mr. Ellis say he intends to quit the ministry. He is now at Bretton Woods, N. H., on his annual vacation.

Mrs. Harriet A. Ellis of Revere, wife of the minister, was released from the Northampton Insane Hospital last Winter, after Governor Foss made a personal investigation of the wife's charge that she had been illegally placed in the institution. Last April the mother was awarded the custody of the daughter.

Mr. Ellis was divorced from his first wife about ten years ago. While at Tufts College he met Miss Harriet Cox of Revere. They were married at Dedham in 1904, much against the wishes of the bride's parents. Ellis at different times has worked as preacher, reporter, lecturer and manager of a branch brokerage office in Cleveland.

CARVER, FORMER YALE HERCULES, LOSES DIVORCE

CHICAGO, July 17.—Charles Carver, former "Yale Hercules," has lost in his fight to secure a divorce from Mrs. Louise Carver, at Fallon, Nev. Telegrams to Attorney James T. Brady, who represented Mrs. Carver before Judge Cooper of the Superior Court, when she obtained a decree of separate maintenance and alimony of $200 per month, announced that the Nevada court considered the Chicago decree a bar to any proceedings there.

While at Fallon Carver created a sensation by appearing in Winter clad in a rough flannel suit and with feet bandaged, wearing sandals and hatless.

FREEMAN FALLS 50 FEET IN AEROPLANE

Archie Freeman had a narrow escape from serious injury when his biplane fell fifty feet to the mud flats a half-mile north of the Point of Pines. The machine was damaged, but Freeman escaped with a shaking up. AUTO HITS POLE; MAN IS KILLED

Following the death of Francis S. Lord, forty-six, of No. 88 Walnut street, Neponset, early today, at the East Boston Relief Hospital, a rigid investigation to fix the blame for the collision of the automobile of Dr. Andrew E. Sherburne of No. 46 Brent street, Dorchester, with an electric pole, will be started at once by the police department.

The accident occurred on the Winthrop street bridge, East Boston. Lord sustained a hemorrage of the brain. Dr. Sherburne was slightly cut and lacerated about the head and face. The third occupant, F. E. Black, No. 10 Waterloo street, Dorchester, suffered cuts upon the head, face and nose and was treated at the East Boston Hospital.

Lord, a native of Portland, Me., was employed by the Stearns Lumber Company as foreman. He boarded at the house of Mrs. E. F. Cook, No. 88 Walnut street, Dorchester. He was a member of the Mystic Rhine and Knights Templar. He was a past grand master of Rehoboth Lodge of Masons. His mother, who lives in Portland, was notified, and started for Boston at once.

UNCLE SAM READY TO SET UP $175,600 WORTH OF CIGARS

Uncle Sam is now expected to keep on selling up the cigars, to the tune of $175,000 worth a year. The national House has already passed the Peters bill, allowing cigarmakers twenty-one cigars a week for their own use free from internal revenue. The cancelling of this privilege had aroused much protest in Boston and other cities.

Representative Payne feared there would be some cheating of the Government and he proposed an amendment requiring that the free-from-duty cigars must be smoked in the factory. The amendment was voted down.

There are 139,578 cigar factory wageearners in the United States, but more than 40 per cent. of these are women, and 13,848 are less than sixteen years of age.

Appeal Made by American From Honduras Prison

Conflicting stories from Honduras, one via Washington, the other via St. Louis, arrived today concerning the fatal shooting of Frederick P. Shaw of Lowell on June 4 at Black River, Honduras, and the arrest of Courtlandt Van Sickler, formerly of St. Louis, on a charge of murder.

The Washington account says Van Sickler shot Shaw, following an altercation. The St. Louis story comes through a letter Van Sickler wrote from a Honduran prison to his sister, Miss Florence Van Sickler, of that city, begging that influence be set in motion to insure him a fair trial and declaring he shot Shaw in self-defense.

It Beats All How Trouble Pursues That Conrad Girl

NEW YORK, July 17.—Ethel Conrad, the young actress, who, with Lillian Graham, was accused of having shot Millionaire W. E. D. Stokes when he called on them in their apartment on June 7, 1911, was found in a vacant lot at One Hundred and Eighty-first street and Fort Washington avenue today, bound and gagged. Near her lay a bottle labelled "Chloroform."

At the Washington Heights Hospital she said she had been calling on Miss Graham.

"I left my friend Lillian at One-Hundred and Tenth street early this morning," said Miss Conrad, "and entered the subway to go straight home.

"When I left the subway at One-hundred and Eighty-first street I noticed a man was following me. The next thing I knew something was placed over my mouth. And that is all I can remember. When she was found she had money and jewelry. No attempt had been made to harm her. The only sign of violence was a handkerchief tied over her mouth with a piece of clothes line.

HUNT FUGITIVE AMONG TRAINS

Shots were fired in a crowd at the North Station today when C. H. Dennison, a prisoner being taken to the naval prison at Portsmouth, N. H., got away from his guards, ran through a train, jumped off in front and disappeared in the yard, eluding his guards. A crowd of incoming commuters joined in the chase.

Dennison was one of five prisoners. Suddenly he gave a leap, darted through the car into the car ahead and ran out to the platform. He jumped from the slowly-moving train. Dodging among the trains, he quickly got out of sight.

The fugitive is described as thirty years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weight 135 pounds, dark complexion and long, brown hair. He wore a brown suit and gray cap.

TWO TRACK WORKERS HIT BY B. & A. TRAIN

Nicholas LaPorte, 20 years old, of No. 102 Battery street, and Philip Oliver, 30, of No. 118 Salem street, were struck by a train today when at work on the Boston & Albany tracks near the Cottage Farm bridge. They were taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital. LaPorte's left foot was cut off and Oliver sustained a severe scalp wound.

WHITMAN ACCUSES POLICE OF MURDER

that he knew, and my knowledge is at the service of the District Attorney.

District Attorney Whitman directly accused the police department of the murder. He said:

I accuse the police department through certain members of it, of having murdered Herman Rosenthal. Either directly or indirectly, it was because of them that he was slain.

Whitman Modifies Statement.

Later in the day District Attorney Whitman modified his earlier statement in which he had accused the police "System" of the murder. In his second statement Mr. Whitman said:

I do not wish to be understood as charging the police with this murder. I have no fight against the police department. I believe that Commissioner Waldo is doing all in his power to run down the murderers and that he is able to cope with the situation.

I have not charged that the police committed the murder but I do say that the police permitted the murder and deliberately allowed the murderers to escape.

The most significant discovery yesterday was the acknowledgement by Thomas Coupe, night clerk at the Elks' Club, that he actually saw Rosenthal shot down and that he positively identified Louis Libby, arrested yesterday as the man who killed Rosenthal.

Says Libby Was Slayer.

District Attorney Whitman said last night Coupe has identified Louis Libby as the man of the party who killed Rosenthal. He will make a splendid witness. There were others in the car whom Coupe thinks he can also identify as soon as they are arrested. Coupe is not sure that Shapiro was at the wheel, but this point can be cleared up later. The car was going so slowly that a man afoot could have stopped it, yet four policemen within a few feet let it get away and then chased an imaginary machine.

The arrest of Libbie brought out a strange chain of circumstances. It developed that he was once a power in the Hesper Club in Lower Second avenue, of which Rosenthal was once president. This is the club that long fourlsbed as a gambling resort and was said to be under the wing of East Side politicians.

Lawyers to Testify.

The Grand Jury investigation of the Rosenthal murder, and the gambling charges made by Rosenthal just before his death will be begun today. It was said in the Criminal Court building that at least two prominent members of the police department will be implicated.

The first witnesses today will be J. J. Donahue, Albert R. Lesinsky and Robert Hibbard, members of the law firms of Hibbard and Lesinsky and J. J. Donahue.

Donahue was once the District Attorney yesterday having come. It is said, of his own volition. He said that he had been called in by Hibbard and Lesinsky to sign a certain chattel mortgage as the mortgagee, but has never received the $1,500, the face value of the mortgage. He only got ten dollars for giving his signature.

Rosenthal charged that Lieutenant Becker loaned $1,500 on chattel mortgage to furnish No. 101 West Forty-fifth street, Rosenthal's house, as a gambling house.

Rosenthal said Donahue was a dummy name for Becker. Donahue insisted that he did not know Becker and only signed his name because he was asked to.

Hibbard was a policeman before he became a lawyer, and has long been an intimate friend of Becker. Lesinsky is his partner and is said to have many clients among the East side gamblers. Their offices are in the St. Paul building.

What Rosenthal Charged Against New York Police

Here is the substance of Herman Rosenthal's indictment of the New York police as contained in his statement to District Attorney Whitman which preceded his murder. Rosenthal charged:

That he began carrying protection money for gambling houses to the police when seventeen.

That in the old days the captain of a precinct collected the graft and the police kept hands off, those who paid.

That Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker was a partner with Jack Rose and Sigmund Rosenfeld in a second avenue gambling house.

That Rose was press agent for Becker, and got newspaper notoriety for him.

That Becker told James White, Charles Foy and Charles Steinhart, three policemen assigned to work with him, that Rosenthal was "all right."

That after Rosenthal had borrowed $2,000 from Big Tim Sullivan, he got $1,500 from Becker to be used in opening the game at No. 104 West Forty-fifth street.

That Becker "cut in" for 20 per cent. of the game.

That Becker put Jack Rose in the house to watch his share.

That Becker was made boss of the gambling situation in charge of the police.

That his income from this job was from $7,500 to $10,000 a month.

That graft was being paid generally by the gamblers to the police.

Mrs. Rosenthal's Story.

Mrs. Rosenthal, broken-hearted over her husband's tragic death, sat in the house of mourning which had been Rosenthal's gambling house till the police suppressed it and told her story. She said:

My Herman is dead. The man who hated him has his wish. The oppression can cease now.

I have just said to District Attorney Whitman that the murder is not due to any war he may have had in the past with other gamblers. There were men here to see him all day yesterday. Some were friends who came to advise him to get out of town. Others were gamblers who wanted to know how far he meant to go in his testimony. To all of them he said that he did not mean to retool any gamblers' name or to get any gambler into trouble. The gamblers all understood that, and were not worrying.

Herman came home at four in the afternoon with Dick Bernard, Sam Bernard's brother, and one of Herman's friends. And right here in this room Dick told Herman he had better go away for a few days.

Herman told Dick: "I shall not leave New York for anybody. This is my home and I do not mean to be driven out of it by any man's threats."

And late, at 9 o'clock, he began to get nervous and said he was going around the corner. I begged him to stay in. I told him they might kill him; that I had a feeling he was going to be murdered.

"Doesn't Dare Murder Me."

"Don't you worry, dear," he said to me. "He doesn't dare murder me. I am the last man in New York he can kill right now."

But I knew better than he did. I worried all night long until 2.30 o'clock. And then when I saw it was not Herman at the door, I knew they had killed him. They said he was sick. I told them not to lie to me. Then they said he had been shot.

But there was one big mistake made when my husband was killed. They thought he was the only one who knew the things he was to tell the Grand Jury. They did not know that I had all his confidence, knew everything that he knew and knew the books of the business. I shall stay right here. I am at Mr. Whitman's disposal. I shall live in this house until the three-year lease expires.

The Comfort and Economy of Tourist Sleeping Cars in Traveling to the Pacific Coast

I would like to explain to you just what a Tourist Sleeping car is, what conveniences and comforts they have and how you can save money by joining one of our through parties, which go to the coast every week in one of these cars, escorted by a special conductor employed by the "Burlington Route" to look after your comfort. For many years the Burlington Route Through Tourist Car Excursions to California have been widely known for the excellence of the service provided and the character of the employes in charge. The whole idea of these parties is to provide a way for people of moderate means to make the California trip comfortably and in thoroughly good hands and at the same time at an expense that is not prohibitive. Please call at the office or write—a postal will do—Mrs. E. K. Boal, General Passenger Agent, B. & A. R. R., 322 Washington Street, Boston, Mass. Telephone Main 6767.

TOILET GOODS STORE

All of you should know the SHEPARD policy with Toilet Goods. It is based on clear Dry Goods ethics. First, we secure the best makes that the markets of the world afford. If a new and scientific beautifier for the teeth, complexion, hair or nails appears in Paris, Vienna, Berlin, New York, Philadelphia, Boston or anywhere else, you'll find it here just as soon as its goodness has been proved.

We'll show you the tried and true original—not a make-believe, counterfeit or substitute.

Were you to compare the chemical analysis of the real with the imitation you'd understand why the latter is cheaper. We don't juggle with the products of chemists and scientists—nor do we attempt to impose upon your credulity by means of names and brands.

Take preparations for teeth as an example: We've every well-known and reliable Powder, Paste and Liquid that you may call for—Lyon's, Colgate's, Hudnut's, Hood's, Sanitol, Calox, Pebeco. The same discrimination and thoroughness are applied to every other part of the business.

Soap is almost a spectacular interest here—so diversified is its scope. More kinds than we'd care to catalogue.

Needing Toilet Articles, you should keep in touch with our doings.

NO COMPROMISE, SAYS ROOSEVELT

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 17.—"I reiterate there is to be no compromise."

This was Colonel Roosevelt's reply today to a query concerning the likelihood of his yielding to the plan of some of his Maryland and Pennsylvania leaders to have the same electors placed upon the straight Republican and the third party ballots in November.

The ex-President's attention was drawn to an interview with E. A. Valkenburg, one of the colonel's Pennsylvania stalwarts in which he indicated that William Flinn and others backing the bolt elector scheme believed themselves to be working for Roosevelt's own interest and that Roosevelt would be able to get the entire thirty-eight electoral votes of the State if he permitted them to go on both the Taft and Roosevelt ballots and leave it to the voters. If this were not done, Van Valkenburg pointed out, Roosevelt would not hope for more than thirty electors from Pennsylvania.

When this was outlined to Roosevelt today he made a grimace. He made it clear that he would fight to the end against having the electors that were named for him at the primaries put on the Taft ticket. Roosevelt takes the attitude that to enter any such ticket would give tacit acknowledgment that Taft was, after all, regularly nominated at Chicago and entitled to as many of the electoral votes as he can manage to control.

to larger offences. It might be just as well to understand at the beginning of the labor troubles in this city that the peace and good order of the community must be preserved."

"No law compels any one to work for any particular person, but when it comes to interfering with the personal liberty of others who want to work, and those persons are deprived of protection, then good government ceases to exist."

Urges Jail Sentence.

Captain Thomas Taft of the police department, prosecuting officer in the court, today urged that jail sentences be imposed. In his argument he said:

"The police department has adopted the policy of urging jail sentences for offences such as these in order to deter others from committing similar offences. They go there to make trouble for others. I ask you to sentence these people to teach them a lesson."

Camara was the first to be arraigned. He seemed somewhat surprised when the additional charge of assault was lodged against him, but denied it. A girl, Sarah Keelan, was its principal accuser. She said that there was a large crowd about the south gate to the Butler mills when she went to work and a larger one at the main gate, about 1,000 there, she thought. During the disturbance, she said, she was struck in the back and in the face by Camara.

"He must have been out of his senses, judge," she said.

William Cheney, overseer of the cloth room at the Butler mills, George P. Woodbe, overseer of the spinning room, and Superintendent John D. Perney of the plant corroborated her testimony. Pierce said that he saw Camara double up his fist and strike the girl.

GENERAL COMMITTEE OF SPINNERS' UNION DISCUSSES HELP PLEA

The General Executive Committee of the International Spinners' Union, with members from all over the Eastern States, met today in Boston to consider the plea of the New Bedford union for financial aid.

The meeting was called at No. 724 Washington street, by President George Thornton of Pawtucket. Those present were: President Thornton, Vice-President D. C. Murphy of Taftville, Ct.; Secretary Urban Flemming of Holyoke; Treasurer Thomas O'Donnell of Fall River; John Hazlewell of New Bedford, Cornelius Hurst of Plainfield, Ct.; James Reynolds of Centreville, R. I.; Frank Mulaney of Pawtucket, R. I.; Michael Finegan of Lawrence, Joseph Ashton of Lowell, Edward Searns of Adams, Freemont Firth of Baltic, Ct., and Richard Bagnall of Utica, N. Y.

Senator Ross, secretary of the New Bedford Spinners' Union, is here to represent the spinners union, in its appeal for financial aid. Senator Ross, in an interview, said:

"The general strike of 14,000 textile workers in New Bedford was brought on by the open attempt of the mill owners to evade the weavers' fine law. By statute enactment the Commonwealth has declared that this kind of fine is illegal. Mill owners, in one open attempt to evade that law, have tried to collect such fines through a so-called grading system. The reason the residents of New Bedford, who number 14,000, are on strike is for no other purpose than to enforce the laws on the statute books of the State which the mill men are trying to evade."

GREEN PARASOL GOES TO REVERE; BETTER WATCH

One of Sherlock Holmes' most famous remarks was "We observe, but we do not SEE."

How many of us does this statement apply to?

The AMERICAN proposes to test your powers of observation.

"The Lady with the Green Parasol" will hand to whoever identifies her at Revere Beach next Sunday a Boston AMERICAN order for $100.

This woman, whose picture will be printed in the AMERICAN several days this week, will stroll along Ocean avenue, the beach and along the Boulevard from Condit's dance hall to Revere street. The only requirement is that the person who has identified "The Lady with the Green Parasol" have in his or her hand, in plain sight, a copy of next Sunday's AMERICAN, and shall say to her, "You are the Lady with the Green Parasol."

That's all there's to it—for the person who really SEES.

Don't say to yourself, "I wonder if she'll really be there?" She will be there all right and stroll up and down the beach and boulevard, as announced. There will be no quibbling about it, either. When she is identified as directed above, the order will be passed over to the one who identifies her without questions of any kind.

But it is important to bear in mind the necessity of complying with the conditions mentioned, viz.: having a copy of next Sunday's AMERICAN in plain sight when you identify her. Any identification made without complying with this requirement will not be noticed.

Everyone who reads this is invited to make their arrangements now, so they may have an opportunity to win this bit of gold—this $100 in cash.

Make your plans to be at Revere Beach next Sunday.

"The Lady with the Green Parasol" will appear on the beach at 2 p. m. and will remain there until 6 p. m., unless captured before 5.

SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

FIVE DOLLARS IS AWAITING ORIGINAL OF THIS PICTURE

Styles differ—and so do ideas.

But there can be no two ideas on the subject of the "style" of Boston's women.

The camera of the AMERICAN'S photographers have proven conclusively that "Boston is the most truly fashionable city in the country."

The AMERICAN cameras will again click merrily all over the shopping district today.

This will be the final week's evidence in the case of New York women vs. Boston women—re "frumpish" charge.

There will be one picture published in the AMERICAN on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week and a whole page of them on Sunday.

Five dollars will be waiting at the American Promotion Department, 5 Winthrop square, for the original of each picture published.

That Boston women shoppers are watching the AMERICAN closely from day to day is amply proven by the list of those who have each received $5 as a reward for their diligence in reading the AMERICAN.

Any woman who went shopping on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of last week or the week before, or who went on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of this week, is likely to find her picture printed in the evening or Sunday AMERICAN.

Any women whose picture is printed but not to put on the clothing worn when the picture was taken and come to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, where a $5 gold piece will be handed to her.

Your picture may appear any day this week or next Sunday, and when it does it means $5 for you.

Remember, pictures appear daily and the final page of them next Sunday.

$1,655,518 FOR G. O. P. IN 1908

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 17.—Frank H. Hitchcock, Assistant Secretary of the National Republican committee in the 1904 campaign and chairman of the Republican committee in the 1908 campaign today appeared before the Clapp sub-committee investigating campaign expenditures and told it that the entire collections of the national committee for 1908 were $1,655,518.27. George L. Sheldon of New York was treasurer.

Hitchcock said that of the entire amount $620,150 was collected by the finance committee of the several States.

"Is there a record of these financial matters still in existence?" "Yes, sir, they were deposited with the secretary of State of New York and George R. Sheldon has a duplicate set of books."

Hitchcock said that offhand he could not recall any of the individual contributions to State committees, but that the records which Mr. Sheldon has should show every contribution.

"When I get the books which I have taken steps to procure," said Mr. Clapp, "I may then want to ask you as to the relation of some of the contributors to interests."

"I'd like to say that we received very few large contributions," replied Hitchcock. "If my memory is correct, there were not more than 25 or 30 that reached as high as $5,000. At the very outset of the campaign we received several very generous contributions before our system of collections had been put into operation. C. P. Taft gave $50,000, William Nelson Cromwell $25,000 and Mr. and Mrs. Lars Anderson $25,000 and Andrew Carnegie $25,000. William Smith Corcoran $15,000 and Frank A. Munsey, Whitelaw Reid, W. J. Boardman and General Corbin $10,000 each.

Hitchcock said that letters requesting $50 contributions were sent to about 4,500 business men, and that in this way $200,000 or $300,000 was obtained. He said General Dupont offered a $2,000 contribution, but that this was refused because at the time the government had a civil suit against his powder company.

William F. Sheehan of the Democratic national committee will be before the investigators tomorrow.

NINETEEN CHAIRMEN INDORSE GOV. FOSS

Governor Foss was overwhelmingly indorsed for re-nomination by the ward chairmen of the Boston Democratic City Committee in a special session called by President Joseph A. Maynard. The vote was 19 to 4. Only three of the chairmen from the twenty-six wards of Boston were absent. Sheriff John Quinn was practically unanimously endorsed for a nomination.

Chairman Howell of the Ward 9 Committee led the silent forces opposed to the renomination of the Governor. Ward 9 and its associate wards favor the nomination of District Attorney Pelletier.

Street Commissioner James A. Gallivan will enter the county primaries as a candidate against Sheriff Quinn. Foss and anti-Foss lines are being closely drawn in the fight for sheriff. Quinn, by his appointees of Governor Foss, is supported by the Boston Ward Democratic chairmen, who believe in the renomination of the Governor, while Gallivan will have the support of Street Commissioner Pelletier.

TAFT PUZZLED BY THE T. R. ELECTORS

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The Taft legal experts, who for two weeks have been endeavoring to find a method to disqualify the Roosevelt electors named in the primaries, have as yet failed to solve the problem. Because of the lack of any precedent many of the lawyers declare there is no solution.

DR. CAHILL WANTS TO BECOME GOVERNOR

Dr. John T. Cahill, former Mayor of Lawrence, jumped into the fight for the Democratic nomination for Governor today and began the circulation of nomination papers that he has just taken out. Dr. Cahill filled out the term of Mayor William F. White, who was sent to jail on a conspiracy charge in 1910, and was re-elected the following year. He lost the nomination for Mayor last year to Michael A. Scanlon, the present Mayor. Dr. Cahill is a graduate of Holy Cross and the Harvard Medical School.

HERBERT KNOX SMITH JOINS BULL MOOSE

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Herbert Knox Smith, who has just resigned as commissioner of the bureau of corporations to espouse the cause of Colonel Roosevelt, it is stated today, probably will take charge of the third party's fight in New England, and may go to Boston.

While Mr. Smith's resignation was expected, the inside cause is more due to differences with Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel than to his love for the Roosevelt standard. Secretary Nagel has interfered much with appointments of investigators into trust problems and at times, when Commissioner Smith has refused to make those appointments, Secretary Nagel has gone over his head.

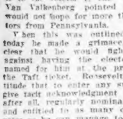
FREE TRIAL TREATMENT

For Skin-Tortured and Disfigured Infants

MOTHERS! MOTHERS!

To know that a warm bath with Cuticura Soap and a single application of Cuticura Ointment will afford immediate, and point to permanent relief for torturing, disfiguring eczemas, rashes, itchings, irritations, crustings, and scalings of the skin and scalp of infants and children, and not to use them without a moment's delay is to fail in your duty. Think of the lives of torture and disfigurement often entailed by the neglect in infancy or childhood of simple skin affections.



If you would test the efficacy of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, before purchasing, send at once to "Cuticura," Dept. 24, Boston, Mass., for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, with 32-page book on skin and scalp troubles, and they will be sent without any other waiver.

Tender-faced men shave in comfort with Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick. At stores or by mail, 25c. Sample free.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Copper Security Prices Irregular In Local Market

W. H. ROSS

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, July 17.—Midday: The Boston market had an irregular tendency this morning but was lacking in features as well as in activity. Dullness was its most pronounced attribute. There was further weakness in Butte and Superior and much of the selling of this issue in this market was said to be on Western account. Litigation fears are the detracting influence. There were fractional declines in a number of other issues, while several coppers made slight gains.

The New York market began the second hour very dull and with most leaders selling lower.

The editor of the London Statist says, in explaining the depreciation of consols: "The main cause of all is the universal belief at home and abroad that war is inevitable between this country (England) and Germany."

Stocks Dull In New York.

There was not much demand for stocks in the New York market when it opened and prices were fractionally lower. It could not be said that weakness prevailed at the start, however, for losses in some quarters were counterbalanced by gains in others. London selling before New York opened depressed Steel in early trading on this side of the ocean. The British were influenced by statements that the Stanley committee will report in favor of dissolving the United States Steel Corporation. While Steel common went down there was an advance in preferred.

Copper stocks were generally lower. Amalgamated and American Smelting going down a little. Union Pacific was also sold in fair volume and at a decline. Southern Pacific was lower and Southern Railway higher. Reading went down, but Lehigh Valley opened unchanged. Fractional declines or gains were noted in other issues.

The Curb was steady.

American heavy shares in London were mixed within a narrow range. In the copper metal market there, spot and futures were each 6s 3d higher.

Copper Metal and Mining.

It is said that quite a heavy tonnage of copper metal was sold yesterday at 17¾ cents for July delivery. Another statement reads: "There was some good bidding for copper sold in second hands at 17¾, until a result, at which price sales were made. It was still a small dealers' market, although these purchases included United Metals Selling Company, Phelps Dodge & Co., and the Anaconda Copper Mining Co. The latter company had sold themselves out for the next two months up to 17¾ cents a pound, were confident that a reduction of this big price would be accomplished upon the resumption of a boiling moving period."

Thompson, Towle & Co. quote "a party who has just returned from Europe" as saying: "Many of the foreign mining companies are of the report that there are hidden supplies of the metal on hand a certainly without foundation, at least at the refineries which I visited. It is true that many have considerable bullion copper at mines plants, but this condition is normal, as there is always more or less of this material on hand to insure the continuous operation of the refineries."

The Boston News Bureau says: "A meeting of the directors of the St. Mary's Mineral Land Co. will probably be held in August to declare the usual dividend of $1, making $2 annual rate for the year."

Operations of the Franklin mine at Houghton were resumed today with twenty-five days' shifts present to maintain order.

The consumption of copper in Germany this year will, it is estimated, be 20 per cent in excess of what was used there last year. Germany at present is using about 40 per cent of the world's output. Statistics show that the Fatherland's consumption was 1,000,000,000 more pounds of copper in 1912 than it did last year.

Financial News in Brief.

The move being made in Washington to get consideration of the Panama Canal tolls and other questions continued until the next session of Congress is very satisfactory to the British government. It has hopes that after the next presidential election British maritime interests will fare better at the hands of Congress in canal connection.

The Prairie Oil & Gas Company, which wants to get an injunction against the Interstate Commerce Commission ruling that pipe lines are common carriers, has advanced the price of crude oil 25 cents a barrel. It is said the dividend will be always lifting something.

It is said that Union Pacific has earned more than 14 per cent. on its capital during the past fiscal year and that the directorate has no intention of cutting the common stock dividend to 7 per cent at the August meeting. It is stated that the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent will then be declared. The road has $216,627,869 of common stock outstanding. Its net earnings for the 1912 fiscal year were less than the net for the preceding year, it is a profit and loss surplus of about $100,000,000.

The Erie road has ordered 50 freight locomotives of the new mikado type, 500 steel underframe all steel passenger coaches and 11 combined passenger, mail and baggage cars, all from builders.

The Western Maryland Railroad Company will open for bids on Aug. 1 for the grading of 17 miles of its limited number of stocks. Big and little exchange men will watch this experiment to get more business with down interest.

The per cent. quarterly dividend of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana is equal to 20 per cent. quarterly on the capitalization of the corporation at the time the Standard Oil Co. was split up several years ago. The company has declared $20,000,000 of stock dividends in 1912 and $29,000,000 of stock, turning the money as it were, over to stockholders instead of to the government. Standard Oil isn't worrying about the result of legislation, in fact, it does not pay much attention to them individually, as they affect the trust's case. It is necessary for Standard Oil to keep litigating till the Taft-Roosevelt bench that agrees with the Standard Oil decision.

Every condition reports continues to be of a nature to send security prices higher, but the only obstacle to the latter proceeding is a neglect of the public to buy. Professional operators provide a wholly genuine market merely by transactions themselves.

Recent car inquiries include 700 hopper cars for the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis; 1,000 for the Grand Trunk; 1,000 for the Canadian Pacific; 400 steel underframe and 100 convertible cars for the Boston & Albany, and 500 steel cars and 150 flat cars for the Southern Railway.

It is stated that the United States Steel Corporation will not follow the Jones & Laughlin example and raise wages because the company is paying the highest wages ever known in the steel industry.

Bradstreet's says: "Crop conditions still continue to be of a nature to send security prices higher, but the only obstacle to the latter proceeding is a neglect of the public to buy. Professional operators provide a wholly genuine market merely by transactions themselves."

Recent car inquiries include 700 hopper cars for the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis; 1,000 for the Grand Trunk; 1,000 for the Canadian Pacific; 400 steel underframe and 100 convertible cars for the Boston & Albany, and 500 steel cars and 150 flat cars for the Southern Railway.

It is stated that the United States Steel Corporation will not follow the Jones & Laughlin example and raise wages because the company is paying the highest wages ever known in the steel industry.

It is announced in Washington that Comptroller of the Currency will shortly begin a series of examinees in all parts of the country to ascertain whether the reports of time that they were taken here, and the number of Boston banks which are believed to have accelerated government action in the matter.

President Worthington of the Chicago & Alton says that if the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen's demands grant the pay demanded by the men, the road will be compelled to raise the rates 20 per cent or more. It is probable that the railroad's same other employes would expect a higher emergence as well.

In order to facilitate trust busting the House of Representatives has passed a resolution providing as a remand that 10 per cent. of the fines imposed by courts for violations of the anti-trust laws shall be turned over to informers.

Rival Sox Play Double-Header

Big Series for Boston Leaders

Jimmy Callahan, the come-back champion, invades town today, to open a series with his fighting band of White Sox from Chicago. A double-header today will be the attraction, and a large throng is expected to be on hand when festivities open at 2 o'clock.

The White Sox are not as high up in the league standing today as they were when they invaded Boston on their last trip, but they are the same hustling bunch of ball players, and between now and Saturday Callahan predicts that he will start a little trouble with Jake Stahl's team.

At the beginning of the season, Chicago was the sensation of the league, leading for a long time. The strenuous work began to tell on the pitchers, and a slump resulted that carried them down to fourth place, where they are now located. The team has been playing better ball for the past week, and it is possible that Callahan's boys will yet cause some trouble.

The Chicago pitchers are back in form and pitching good ball. Walsh, Benz, White and others are going nicely and the Red Sox will have to play good ball in order to win. Of course, Ed Walsh is bound to give the Sox a good battle, but he will undoubtedly pitch only one game during the season.

There was a time that the Red Sox thought that Big Ed was unbeatable, but now the Speed Boys can beat him practically as often as any of the other pitchers. The spitball is no longer a terror to the Red Sox batters and the day he pitches the Boston boys will go into the game confident of beating him.

The two games on tap today should be hummers. Joe Wood and Buck O'Brien are due to pitch. Wood is at present leading the American League pitchers and he fears no team. The White Sox are as easy for Joe as any other team. Buck O'Brien has also improved in his work, and just now he is showing the fine form that he displayed when he made such a big splash when he entered the big leaguers last Fall.

New Yorkers Want Red Sox to Win Out

New York fans are pulling for the Boston Red Sox to win the American League pennant, for they figure that if this comes to pass the Giants will stand a much better chance to win the next world's series than if the Athletics would repeat.

This belief is based on the fact that Marquard, a left-hander, is figured to have a better chance against a team made up principally of left-handed hitters like Boston than he would against the Athletics.

It is argued that a good left-handed pitcher can beat the Red Sox, and McGraw would work Marquard in more than half of the games should it come down between the Giants and Red Sox to decide the world's championship.

PILGRIMS OPEN WITH THE REDS

CINCINNATI, July 17.—The Boston Pilgrims, who occupy the "trailer" position in the National league race, arrived in town today for their series with Hank O'Day's Redlegs. Although the Pilgrims hold down the last place in solid style, the Reds expect several hard games before the visitors leave town.

The Pilgrims dropped off at a way station yesterday for a little exercising, and they got it at Kewanee, Illinois. The Kewanee club of the Central Association put up a game battle against them.

Boston won, 5 to 2, on a homer by Devlin. The circuit smash was a fluke, the ball bounding behind a pile of lumber in left field.

Each team got eight hits. House of Kewanee settled after the third inning and held the Braves to three hits. Nearly 2,500 fans turned out to see the game.

VETERAN RACERS AT BEACH TRACK

Racegoers will be taken back ten years next Saturday night at the Revere track when they see the lineup in the motor-paced race, for the trio of riders were at the same game a decade ago.

They were fast men then, and, contrary to the general rule in athletics, they appear to be fast men still, and a good hard contest is expected.

The starters will be James F. Moran of Chelsea, Nat Butler of Cambridge and Joe Nelson of Newark. The first two have been riding continuously since they started in the game, while Nelson dropped out a few years ago.

Joe Nelson was attracted by the whirr of the wheels at the Newark track and several months ago prepared for a reentry. He trained steadily at Newark and soon displayed considerable of his old form.

One thing in Nelson's favor is that he still is a very young man, for he was barely out of his teens when he retired from racing. For that reason he came back easily. Although an old-timer in the accepted sense, he is the youngest of the trio.

Jimmy Moran has recovered from the effects of the fall he sustained last Saturday night and while his head is sore and his face marked up, he is riding fast in training and yesterday said that he would be in shape for the 25-mile event next Saturday night.

An effort is being made to arrange a big match race for Saturday night, in addition to the paced event. The men wanted are Leon "Tricky" Comes, the French champion, and Frank Kramer, the American champion.

CRICKETERS IN DRAW.

PHILADELPHIA, July 17.—Scoring 320 runs for a loss of only five wickets in the second inning, the Merion Cricket Club eleven succeeded in making a draw of their match with the Rosedale team of Toronto. The Canadians had scored 300 runs when they finished their first innings, while the home team had only accumulated 161 for the same period.

BRITONS-YANKS IN TENNIS PLAY

America and England will once more clash for the right to play Australia for the Davis Cup. France, which was so much feared, was conclusively eliminated last week by Britons.

C. P. Dixon won both of his matches in singles, defeating Decugis and Gobert, and Gore, although Gobert proved too much for him, managed to dispose of Decugis.

In the doubles the English pair, Dixon and Roper Barrett, took the honors from Gobert and Laurentz. It was, therefore, a British victory by four matches out of five.

Naturally the next question is: What will America's chances be when the Englishmen face them at the nets? Very little can really be said in this regard since it is yet unknown what players are to represent the United States.

Last year, it will be remembered, Larned and McLaughlin played in the singles and Little and Bundy in the doubles. America registered a clean sweep then in the singles, losing only the doubles.

There are rumors now however, that Larned will not be on this year's team, and his loss would certainly be severely felt. The only dope that is possible just now is to compare the score of the matches between America and Great Britain last September with the recent scores between Great Britain and France. Here they are:

Great Britain vs. America—Larned defeated Dixon, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4; Barrett defeated McLaughlin, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4; Larned defeated Dixon, 8-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4; McLaughlin defeated Dixon, 8-6, 7-5; Larned defeated Lowe, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5, 6-1; Dixon and Beamish defeated Little and Bundy, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Great Britain vs. France—Dixon defeated Decugis, 6-3, 9-7, 6-2; Gobert defeated Barrett, 6-3, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4; Dixon defeated Gore, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2; Gore defeated Decugis, 6-3, 6-4 (withdrew); Dixon and Barrett defeated Gobert and Laurentz, 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1.

Swimming Match for South Boston Title

A swimming match to decide the long-standing question regarding the champion of South Boston will be held off City Point Saturday, August 3.

Vice-Commodore Edward L. Hopkins of the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club has donated a solid silver gold-lined cup, which will be awarded to the winner. Owing to the value of the trophy, it has been decided that races should be held every year for three years, and the person winning the most contests will be the title holder of the trophy.

The tournament will be held under the direction of the United States Volunteer Life-Saving Corps, and it is expected will prove one of the most successful aquatic meets held in South Boston in recent years.

Local yachtsmen will be invited to illuminate their crafts, and the city will contribute to the enjoyment of the thousands through the medium of the Municipal band.

Pittsfield Player Is Wanted by Pilgrims

NORTH ADAMS, July 17.—Bruggy, the hard-hitting outfielder of the Pittsfield club, is wanted by the Boston Nationals, according to reports from the Shire City. Billy Hamilton, scout for the Pilgrims, was very favorably impressed with the Pittsfield player's work. Bruggy tells of a varied career on the diamond this year. From the St. John's College nine he joined a club in the United States League. Later he claims to have gone with Detroit, but was then sold to Providence. Then he was released and he caught on with Pittsfield.

NEW RULES IN BIG GOLF MATCH

Robert C. Watson, secretary of the United States Golf Association, announces the conditions governing the annual national open championship tournament which will be held at the links of the Country Club of Buffalo, Thursday and Friday, August 1 and 2.

As usual, the competition will be at seventy-two holes of medal play, thirty-six holes to be played each day, and the prize for the winner will be the title and championship trophy now held by J. J. McDermott, Atlantic City, $300 and a gold medal.

There are nine other prizes of $150, $100, $80, $70, $60, $50, $40, $30 and $20. In the event of an amateur winning any of these he is to be given the equivalent of his prize in plate.

There is an interesting clause in the conditions, which will bar players whose score at the finish of the first thirty-six holes exceeds by fifteen strokes the tenth place taking part in the third and fourth rounds.

The entrance fee of $5 should accompany all entries, which will be received at the office of the secretary, Grand Central Terminal, No. 70 East Forty-fifth street, New York city, not later than 6 o'clock on Thursday, July 25.

Schoolboy Oarsmen to Be Given Medals

Because of the fine rowing of the Boston interscholastic eight in the race with Worcester High June 23 on Lake Quinsigmond and in the July 4 regatta on the Charles River, where it captured first honors, the athletic committee of the B. A. A. will award the boys medals and hat bands.

Wesley Coleman of the Cambridge Latin, who stroked the eight, will enter Lowell Textile School next Fall. He may join the B. A. A. and row under its colors next Summer.

Ernest Soucy of Boston Latin, another prominent member of the eight, expects to enter Harvard next Fall.

Coast Soon to Bar All Prize Fights

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—Even the best friends of prize fighting say that the game is bound to end in State, one of the few remaining stamping grounds of the once manly art of self-defence.

To be sure, prize-fighting was abolished by the last Legislature, but "boxing matches of limited number of rounds not to exceed twenty" were permitted.

Now these are to be wiped out by the next Legislature. Candidates are bobbing up in all parts of the State who will run for the State Legislature with the slogan, "Down with public boxing matches."

This fact is recognized as pointing the way of the wind. Jim Coffroth of San Francisco announced the other day that he was going to start a fight club here and the people for a time discussed nothing else.

"It will kill the game," was the universal cry, based on the belief that Tom McCarey was having all he could do to keep peace with the public, and if there were two fight promoters bidding for fights and more fights the public would not stand for it.

Letters are received by every mail in every newspaper office protesting against permitting fights. Many already agree with Earl Rogers, the attorney, who leaped into the ring after the unsatisfactory ending of the Wolgast-Rivers fight on the Fourth and shouted: "This is the end of the fight game in California."

Five Jockeys Are Hurt in One Race

VALLEY FIELD, Que., July 17.—Five jockeys were injured, three of them seriously, when five of eight horses fell in a race.

The jockeys are Striven, who is suffering from concussion of the brain; Williams, injured internally; Robidas, whose leg is broken, and Knight and White, who sustained minor hurts.

Matty and O'Keefe Fight Draw

Baldwin Had Slight Advantage

By JACK CONWAY.

TOMMY O'KEEFE isn't going to retire for a few more years at least. The veteran Philadelphia lightweight put up a great battle in his twelve-round contest with Matty Baldwin of Charlestown at the Pilgrim A. A. last night and, when hostilities had ceased, the bout was declared a draw by Referee Muffitt Flaherty.

The Quaker gave a remarkable exhibition of fighting but he should not have been given a draw. Matty had the best of the mixing in six rounds, three rounds were even, while O'Keefe had a margin in three chapters.

The Philadelphia boxer had the best of the fighting at long range and his clever footwork, ducking and ring generalship at times made the Bunker Hill pride look foolish. Tommy proved conclusively that he still knows a great deal about the art of self defence.

Baldwin had all the best of the infighting. His wicked left to the stomach, followed by a smashing right to the jaw, time and again forced O'Keefe to cover up. Matty forced the fighting in the majority of the rounds and his opponent would have fared poorly if he did not possess such a fine left jab. O'Keefe would soon let his left crashing through Baldwin's defence with wonderful accuracy and would force the local star to slow up for a few seconds.

THE men started off at a fast pace in the opening chapter with Baldwin having the best of the going. He was very aggressive and rocked Tommy with short, snappy lefts to the wind. The latter was in the best of condition and gave a fine exhibition of footwork.

Baldwin continued his good work in the second round. He kept boring in and O'Keefe did a lot of covering up and hobbling. In fact, during the entire fight he was guilty of holding over and over again.

O'Keefe solved Baldwin's attack in the third round and when Matty would lead with his left he would block it with his right and then send his own left crashing to Baldwin's jaw. O'Keefe's speed enabled him to evade many of Matty's wild rushes. The Philadelphian also outpointed Baldwin in the fifth round.

The fast pace began to tell on Tommy and he was not able to hold Baldwin at bay in the sixth and seventh rounds. The latter got in some solid lefts to the stomach which forced O'Keefe to retreat to the ropes.

The Charlestown idol started after Tommy like a regular champion in the eighth round. He was out to land a K. O. punch but O'Keefe was too fast and clever. Whenever he was in a bad fix, he would cover up and hobble onto Matty's gloves.

THE Quaker showed flashes of wonderful fighting ability in the ninth round and easily had Baldwin on even terms. Matty came back strong in the tenth and run up a big lead.

From then until the end it was a case of up and tuck with the honors pretty even.

The decision of the referee was a very popular one with the crowd, which admired O'Keefe's gameness.

THE three six-round preliminaries were all good. Jimmy Moriarty of Lowell disposed of Peck LaFavor after two rounds of hard fighting. LaFavor went down after Moriarty landed several stiff punches to the wind.

Frankie Mack of Belmont won from Charley Beyers of the South End. Beyers landed several foul blows. He hit Mack when he was down in the second round and he also walloped him several times after the referee had ordered the boys to break. This was due to excitement, however.

Jack Munies of Charlestown won from Chicken Roalin in three rounds in the opening preliminary.

BESIDES the four bouts, there was plenty of music. The Joe Daly trio gave a fine exhibition. The feature of the evening was the selections by Jerry McCarthy, the Red Sox mascot.

King Entertains Olympic Stars

American Athletes Coming Home

STOCKHOLM, July 17.—Cheers for the American athletes who had again swept the world's arena rang along the waterfront here today as the liner Finland prepared to sail from Stockholm bearing the majority of the members of the victorious American athletic team which won the Olympic games.

The Finland will touch at Dover, England, on her way to New York. The ship of triumph bears scores of trophies captured by the Yankee athletes in the international competitions here.

Not all of the team were on the Finland, some of the athletes electing to see more of the world before returning home to receive the plaudits of their friends and admirers. Others of the athletes accepted invitations to compete in various meets to be held throughout Europe.

Since capturing the fifth Olympiad the Americans have become objects of keen interest wherever any attention is paid to contests of brawn. Invitations from many quarters have been pouring in upon the American victors to participate in athletic tournaments.

Thousands of persons lined the water front to give the Yankees a rousing farewell. A band played American airs and the people cheered. Flags were waved and there was every evidence of cordiality.

The sting of defeat was wiped out in the waves of admiration and friendship which swept over Swedes and visitors alike.

Many of the foreign athletes who are still here went on board the Finland and bade good-by to the Yankees before the ship sailed.

A favorite form of farewell was: "We'll see you in Berlin in 1916."

The next Olympiad will be held in the German capital four years hence. Horse riding competitions and distribution of certain prizes were on the program for today. The events consisted of riding, jumping and team competition for military mounts.

The palace today was the scene of a State banquet which proved a fitting ending of the main part of the Olympic meeting.

King Gustave entertained 400 guests in the grand hall. The 400 included the members of the Olympic committee of the various nations, the foreign diplomats, the members of the Swedish Cabinet and all the visiting officers.

The King, in the guards uniform of light blue, walked about and conversed with many of the guests. One of the interesting features to the foreigner was the strange regalia worn by the court officials and servants.

Those standing behind the royal family at the table were uniforms of the Swedish colors, blue and yellow.

WORLD SERIES GAMES FREE TO FANS

Its true that it's only once in a decade that Boston and New England "fans" get a chance to root for a pennant winning team but they've got it this year—so what's the use of kicking.

Any man, woman, boy or girl in New England, who ever handled a baseball will find their fingers itching next Fall, when the World's Championship games are being decided.

The AMERICAN is going to send the twenty most popular fans in New England to attend the World's series games, wherever they may be played, all expenses paid.

That's enough for a start!

Whatever side shows the AMERICAN may be able to arrange for, you may be sure will be provided.

What's the answer?

The answer is that any New England fan who has any "grouch" or "gumption" about him should nominate himself in the World's Series Contest today and make a try for one of these trips.

The vote coupon, printed daily in the AMERICAN, will send the winners to the games and the twenty who have ambition enough to realize a good opportunity when it is offered them will be the ones who will take the trips.

The regular vote value during the contest will be two votes daily and ten votes Sunday. And under no circumstances will the vote value be changed during the contest.

EARL KING TO RACE NUT BOY

A series of seven fast races will be staged at the Franklin Field Speedway, Dorchester, on Saturday afternoon, by the whips of the Dorchester Driving Club.

The card is well matched, and some good racing should be the result. Nut Boy will be seen in the fast trotting event against Earl King, and records should be within touch of both horses, as they are going fast at present.

Charley King, A. T. Wheelock's fast gelding, will be seen in the feature pacing event, being matched against E. E. Power's fast C. E. R., with Mc. Burns in the sulky. The entries:

CLASS A—FAST TROT.

Nut Boy, b.g. (P. O'Hearn); Earl King, b.g. (H. C. Gallison).

CLASS B—PACE.

McGraw is After Pitcher Lefty Tyler

PITTSBURGH, July 17.—Manager McGraw, alarmed at the manner in which the Giants are slipping and worried at the rush of the Cubs, is making desperate efforts to bolster his pitching staff.

Southpaw Tyler of the Boston Pilgrims is the man he is trying to land. Infielder Strick and Outfielder Josh Devore are the men he is willing to give in exchange for the star southpaw of the Boston club. The deal may go through. Again it may not. Manager Kling has the deal under consideration.

This is not one of those "reported deals." McGraw offered the young infielder and Devore for the twirler. Some of the Chicago baseball people were consulted. If the trade does not go through it will be because KKling did not want to make it. McGraw was willing, for the first step came from him.

McLean Wins Praise For Morecroft Rescue

Members of the Morecroft family and others who were present are vigorously denying the report that Annie Morecroft sank twice in her attempt to swim to the Boston Light last Sunday, before she was finally rescued by John McLean, the Revere life guard.

According to the latest reports, Miss Morecroft, who was accompanied on the swim to the light by her brother George and McLean in a boat, had been swimming a strong stroke until she reached a point off Fort Strong, when she was taken suddenly ill. McLean noticed the plucky little swimmer was in trouble and he quickly went to her assistance.

The two men then worked over her until land was reached at Long Island. The doctor who attended her declared that if it was not for the timely rescue by McLean, she would have died in the water.

Congratulations from all sides are today being poured on the big Revere life guard for his quick work and act of bravery in rescuing the girl.

BIG RACE MEET FOR LARCHMONT CLUB

NEW YORK, July 17.—It is confidently expected by the regatta committee of the Larchmont Yacht Club that all records for regattas will be broken at the annual race week of the organization that starts next Saturday and continues over Saturday, July 27. More than 150 boats will start in the different classes. This will be the largest number of starters ever seen at an American regatta. Entries have been received from all parts of the Atlantic coast.

GAINOR LEAVES HOSPITAL

DETROIT, Mich. July 17.—Del Gainor, the first baseman of the Detroit baseball team, was discharged from the hospital, where he has been confined for two weeks suffering from a broken hand. The surgeons say he will be able to play with the team on its return home.

MELLODY MEETS A TARTAR IN WALSH

NEWARK, N. J., July 17.—Honey Mellody was knocked to his knees with a right hand swing on the jaw in the first round of his bout with John Walsh at Morris Park here. He was also badly punished about the face. Mellody was trying the "come-back" act.

A thunderstorm broke in the fourth round and as there is no covering over the ring the place was flooded. Referee Lyons called the bout off. There was but little fighting after the first round.

TIGERS GET COTTON LEAGUE TWIRLER

JACKSON, Miss., July 17.—Patrick McGhee, pitcher for the Vicksburg, Miss., team of the Cotton States League, has been sold to the Detroit American League team for $700. He is to report at the end of the season.

Jamaica Plain K. of C. Nine Out for Title

A slashing game is expected when the strong Jamaica Plain Knights and the Santa Maria Knights of Malden clash at Billings field, Roxbury, Saturday afternoon. The Jamaica Plain team won the title last year while the Malden aggregation is now in the lead, having won all of its games.

The Jamaica Plain Knights have been playing sterling ball this season. After losing their first game of the season, they rounded into championship form and have been having things all their own way lately. Many good players are in the Jamaica Plain lineup.

O'Brien, the former Latin School star, is doing the heavy work on the mound while Captain Reardon, who won fame with the Houghton & Dutton team, is behind the bat. T. Finn is taking care of first base in faultless fashion.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

The Smiling Beauty

By Hazel Dawn

AN OBJECT LESSON FOR THE GIRL WHO CAN SMILE PRETTILY BUT WON'T

Miss Hazel Dawn, the original "Pink Lady," and member of Florenz Ziegfeld's coterie of famous beauties, is shown here in various poses that aptly serve to show the value of a pretty smile.

By HAZEL DAWN.

I HAVE been asked to give my particular secret for beauty to the readers of this paper.

I don't believe that I have any especial formula for beauty, but if I were to sum up in a word the quality which to me is the greatest beautifier of the human face, I should call it happiness.

Happiness expresses itself in laughter, and to me the laughing face is the prettiest of all.

I have always cultivated a sense of humor and done my hair up in a simple way, and whatever good looks I have have been enhanced by both characteristics.

I have seen many girls who ought to be pretty, and whose natural expression was glum and depressed, or who had overtopped their small faces with masses of false hair, bandeaux and ornaments until they were anything but attractive.

I think your face expresses your habitual and characteristic train of thought. You can't have a disagreeable, unlovely disposition and expect to look like Lillian Russell, who is just as suitable as she looks to be. On the other hand, even if you haven't classic features and a Cupid's bow mouth, if you radiate good humor and affection, these qualities will shine in your face, and no matter what kind of a complexion you have, or how straight your hair may be, some people in the world are bound to think you are a dear, and a few will think you beautiful to look at.

So my advice to the girl who wants to be beautiful is to laugh and be merry.

A Great Tonic

Laughter is the greatest tonic in the world, the greatest natural beautifier. I am always glad to hear the audience laugh, not only because I know that they appreciate the work of the actors on the stage, but because it is so good for them. Worry makes one old, laughter rejuvenates.

Laughter is just as good an exercise as deep breathing, and you'll never find a person with a hearty, ringing laugh, constantly laughing at something or other, who hasn't a pretty good pair of lungs. If you want to be pretty, be an optimist.

If you want to be a stage success, be an optimist, and if you want to succeed in the career of a home-maker, be a double-dyed optimist and cultivate a laugh.

We can't all be Mark Tapleys, but a good many of us can cultivate his optimistic point of view. That is certainly one thing the stage will do for you. A stage career is full of ups and downs of worries and petty irritations, no matter how successful one may be. Now if one is going to be temperamental and let everything worry one, when the curtain rings up in the evening there is no vitality left with which to give a good performance for which the audience had paid admission.

So the actress by and by begins to take things more easily and neither one night stands nor bad food can ruffle her spirits. She refuses to be annoyed, and if she is upset or nervous she is sufficient of an actress in every day life not to show it, but to assume the happy expression for which she is celebrated, and which is one of her business assets.

Women who laugh a great deal stay young longer than those whose faces are sad, severe or even merely earnest. The severe expression tends to lengthen the face, and it always pulls the corners of the mouth down. These long lines are the lines of tragedy and age. The mouth that turns up is the mouth of youth and comedy. No woman needs to grow to be middle aged with those deep lines at the lower corners of the mouth. Those lines come because one is too severe or has worried too much, or even been a little cross, when with a well-developed sense of humor and a little will power one could have turned those self-same drooping corners upward.

Not Worth While

Have you ever caught a glimpse of yourself suddenly when you were walking by, deep in thought, and looked up to see your reflection in the shop's mirror? Have you realized how severe, cross and anxious you looked? Do you know that because you couldn't match a sample of ribbon your face took on the annoyed expression of an elderly cross-grained Prime Minister?

Is it worth while to make ugly lines in one's face just for trivial things as we women are constantly doing?

The dressmaker disappoints us, and we frown a whole day. Now, by developing a sense of humor, you learn that it is the nature of dressmakers to disappoint, and you avoid this trial by ordering your frock a long time in advance.

A sense of humor does a great deal toward helping one to be charitable to one's neighbor, and I think that charitableness and kindliness are reflected in the face sooner than any other thoughts.

The skin may be disfigured with scars or marks, but if the spirit behind the face is a kindly one people are bound to see a certain beauty striving to express itself.

When I said I believed in a sense of humor as a particular beautifier I also added that I always did my hair plain. You will seldom find a girl with a real sense of humor and a good looking gloss who will make a ridiculous object of herself by displaying hairdressers' goods bought by the pound and lustrously attached to her hair.

If nature has been very stingy with you and only gives you a couple of hairs, I think any woman is justified in supplementing the deficiency, but I have seen so many girls with really nice hair cover up their own tresses with importations from China, where the coarse long hair comes from, that I wonder if they have any idea how ridiculous they look.

For stage purposes it is often necessary to wear artificial hair, because the effects on the stage have to be heavier and stronger than in real life. That is why one is forced to paint and make up because the strong electric light makes even the healthiest complexion look ghastly. A few soft natural curls on the forehead wouldn't be seen from the back row of the orchestra, so heavier artificial curls are often used, but the girl who thinks that she is beautifying herself by adopting these artifices and bringing them into the light of day is very much mistaken.

She shows that she lacks a sense of proportion and a sense of humor. The latter saves one from many a foolish mistake which the seeker after beauty is likely to make.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from Hewitt's Rexall Drug Co., and apply a little of it at night, and in the morning you will see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

To stop a headache in one minute get 25 cents worth of yellow bottled and apply externally.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

O Gee, it is hot. I sed wen I calm home the uther nite. I have nevver saw it so hot. Mr. & Major Youngs went in swimming in the harbor & it felt so good that we almost had a noshun to swim a mile.

How often have I told you two kids not to go in swimming, sed Pa. There are a lot of other ways to keep cool.

I know there are, I sed to Pa, but there aint many ways for a kid to keep cool. Kids cant join any of them indoor yacht clubs, like all you men do, I told Pa. There is a lot of electric fans in this world, I sed to Pa, but most all of them is in places ware a kid cant go. You go on & set under yure electric fans, I told Pa, & me & Major Youngs will go in swimming.

I nevver heard you talk back to me like that, sed Pa. What in the world has got into you?

Nothing, I sed to Pa, but I think that all kids ought to go in swimming all they want to & I am going out into the country next week, too, with Major Youngs, I sed.

You know who he means, sed Ma to Pa, he means that littel boy that is his chum. You dident think Bobbie was going to join the army, did you?

No, sed Pa, but I dount think boys shud go roaming around, swimming in the harbor & Going out into the country without thare parents knowing sumthing about it. You can bet yure life, Pa sed, that wen I was a child I nevver swam in any harbor.

Of course you dident, sed Ma, you swam a measly littel creek that ran thru Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, & at that you calm pritty near drowning. You let Bobbie & his littel friend alone.

I suppose I will have to if you say so sed Pa, but it goes against my grain to have kids romping around in dangerous places. Thea Ma had Pa hooked, I cud see that much. She went rite over to the library tabel & she picked up a magazen wich had a artikel in it wich Pa had rote, the naim of the artikel was Roaming Wild. Then Ma read this, wich Pa had rote:

Roaming wild. How desilteful, how grand. The smell of the weeds, the swamps, the streems. The twitter of birds that sing in the far places, ware few white men has ever sat thare bare feet, & ware the condor looks down from its ten thousand-feet high cliff, sooring now & then into the wild stormy air above the raging sea.

Roaming wild. Think what that means. Think of the jungles, the Grate Northwest, the African desert with its burning sands & all the strange, queer places of the erth.

Then Ma begun to laff. You must have been kind of strange & queer yureself wen you rote that artikel, sed Ma, & then you have the nerve to ask littel Bobbie & his boy freends to keep out of the harbor. Go to bed & snoor, sed Ma to Pa.

Some Summer Modes

For Morning and Afternoon

FROM THE LATEST DESIGNS OF THE PARIS AND BERLIN COUTURIERES

A Walking Costume—Carried out in fine white material relieved by a narrow black band running down the front of the skirt; this makes a very effective costume.

A Pannier Gown—The jacket and pannier are here made of taffetas, which is also used for the embroidered panel, which falls over the front of the skirt.

An Attractive Wrap

This is a new and most attractive form of wrap for daytime wear. The kimono and bodice are of rich lace over rose-colored satin; the broad revers and wide cuffs are of the same satin. Note the simple but charming fastening formed of rouleaux of silk and lace-covered buttons.

The skirt portion of this wrap is made of natural colored shantung.

Married Life the Third Year

No. 58—Helen Is Taken Ill in London and Warren Leaves Her in the Hotel Alone

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

HELEN opened the door, gave a quick shuddering glance around the hotel room, then threw herself across the foot of the bed.

She was ill—tremblingly, quiveringly ill. Hot and cold flashes were sweeping over her.

It had come upon her suddenly while she was going through the British Museum. How she got back to the hotel she did not know. There was a dazed recollection of asking a policeman what bond to take, and of the ride back, which seemed endless—but nothing was clear.

And now she lay there too weak to even take off her things. What was it? Was she going to be very ill?

If only she could reach Warren! She was terrified at the thought of being there alone until 6—the time they had arranged to meet. But there was no way she could get him by 'phone.

With a determined effort she arose, got out of her clothes and into a loose dressing gown, but she was so dizzy she could hardly stand.

Oh, how good it felt to slip in between the cool fresh sheets, for now she was burning with fever. In a moment her hot face had warmed the pillow, and she moved her head for a cooler spot.

She had intended to ring for the maid while she was up, and now she lay looking at the bell, dreading the effort it would take to reach it. Her whole body seemed to shrink from motion, she wanted only to lie still.

When once more she finally forced herself out of bed and over to the bell, she crept back again with a wave of nausea surging through her, while the whole room seemed to sway.

The maid came, a typical English maid with white cap and rosy complexion. With quick sympathy she asked if Madame was ill.

Helen sent her for some ice water—"with ice in it." For the lukewarm water the English drank always sickened her.

Never had the clinking of ice against a pitcher sounded so grateful. The maid put the water on a stand by the bed and Helen drank eagerly a large glassful.

Warren Arrives

"Perhaps Madame has had a chill," she suggested, when Helen told her of the hot and cold flashes and the cold perspiration.

A chill! Strange that she had not thought of that. Unquestionably it had been a chill. But it was more than that now, for she was conscious of a sore throat and of a curious ache in every limb.

"Would Madame like to see a doctor?"

Helen hesitated. She knew nothing of the English doctors, and ill as she was, she had visions of enormous bills.

"No, I think I'll wait till my husband comes—he'll be here at six."

"If you'll take a little brandy, ma'am," ventured the maid. "That's always good for a chill."

There's a flask of brandy in Mr. Curtis' satchel—she one ever there on the chair. I don't think it's locked.

When the maid had gone she lay back with closed eyes. The brandy was tingling through her, bringing a delicious sense of drowsiness. Her thoughts grew confused. In a few moments she was asleep.

"Hello there! What's all this?"

She awoke with a start to find Warren standing beside the bed. For a moment she was too dazed to speak. Then she murmured a vague:

"O, dear, I'm so sick!"

"Sick? What's the trouble?"

"I'm afraid I've had a chill."

"Chill! Nonsense! Something you've eaten has upset you."

"But, Warren, I've a fever now. Just feel how hot my face is."

Helen was not one of the many women who exaggerate and take advantage of every slight illness that they may receive more sympathy and attention from their husbands. Yet she was now conscious of a thrill of something like satisfaction when Warren felt her forehead and found it so feverish that the curt indifference of his manner was somewhat modified.

"Yes, you are a little feverish," he admitted. "You've taken cold, that's all. It's this confounded climate. Upsets anybody. Don't feel well today myself."

A Disappointment

It was one of Warren's characteristics that whenever Helen felt badly he would always make some remark about not being well himself.

He had not kissed her since he entered, and now she put up a tremulous hand to draw down his head.

"Oh, I'm all dusty," drawing back. "This London grime cuts into your skin. Let me get washed up."

"Guess you don't feel like going out to dinner?"

"Oh, Warren!" She could not keep the reproach out of her tone.

"Well, I'm not asking you to. Needn't put on such an injured air. What do you want sent up here?"

In a rush it came to Helen that she was to be left alone again—that he was to send up her dinner and go out for his.

"Dear, can't you have your dinner sent up, too?"

"Certainly not. I couldn't cut up here. Now, for heaven's sake, don't get fussy just because you're a little upset. I'll send up some chicken—ah. What else?"

"I don't think I can eat anything," tremulously turning away.

"Course you can. A little broth'll be good for you. I won't be gone long. Just going to some chop house near here."

He stooped over and kissed her hurriedly.

"Now don't think you're going to be sick. It's only this beastly climate. Most Americans get a touch of it."

When the door closed after him Helen lay staring at the wallpaper. Usually her love so blinded her that she did not often realize Warren's utter selfishness, but tonight it seemed forced upon her.

How could he leave her alone, when he could so easily have had his dinner sent up? What if she should be seriously ill over here? It was not the illness that she thought of with such terror, but the fear of learning to what extreme Warren's selfishness and indifference might go. She must not be ill—she must not put him to that test.

A little later there was a knock at the door, and a waiter entered with a tray and placed it on the bed beside her. There was a bowl of chicken broth, thin buttered toast and some crisp fresh romaine salad.

At least, Warren had remembered that she loved romaine. It was an absurdly little thing to offset the rest of his selfishness, yet it brought a faint glow of pleasure.

But she could not eat. Just the exertion of raising on her elbow to get at the tray made her dizzy.

When Warren returned he frowned at the untouched tray.

"That's no way to do. You've got to eat to keep up your strength."

"Dear, I couldn't!" appealingly stretching out her hand on the coverlet with the hope that he might take it and sit down beside her.

"You haven't tried," ignoring her hand. "Now, see if you can't take some of that broth. Wait, I'll fix that pillow at your back. By George, these English pillows are heavy and hard as bricks. Thought you were going to have the maid take off this bolster."

"I did tell her, dear, but I guess she forgot."

"Huh, she didn't want to take it off. She's always made her beds with a big soggy bolster and two big soggy pillows, and she's not going to change. That's the English of it."

His jerked off the bolster so roughly that the whole bed shook and the bowl of broth sloshed out on the tray cloth.

"There now," adjusting the two remaining pillows at Helen back.

Obediently she sipped at the broth, then pushed it aside with a faint "Dear, I CAN'T! My throat's too sore!"

"Throat sore? Why's that?" His tone implied that she had wilfully chosen to have a sore throat.

Alone Again

"It's been sore all afternoon. You don't think I can be getting tonsilitis? Doesn't that start with a chill?"

"Tonsilitis—huh! Wonder you don't say diphtheria. You get a touch of cold and think you've something serious. Here, I'll ring to the quarter-hour chimes from some ring for the waiter to take this tray, and distant church tower.

"Now, you turn over there and try to sleep. You're ready for the night, ain't you?

"Well, now, don't get up and do a lot of fussing around and catch more cold. That thing's loose—sleep in that. I'm going downstairs to get some letters. And I want to find you asleep when I come back. I'll turn in without waking you. You'll be all right in the morning."

He had switched off the light so it would not shine in her eyes, and Helen lay there in the darkened room with an ache in her heart that was much harder to bear than the pain in her throat.

When, an hour later, he came back, she was not asleep, but she lay with closed eyes pretending that she was.

He got out of his clothes with a heavy man's ponderous attempt to be silent. The bed creaked loudly when he got in but still Helen feigned unconsciousness. It would only irritate him to find her awake.

In a few moments he was sleeping soundly, while she lay beside him restlessly turning her heated pillow and listening to the quarter-hour chimes from some

HOT WEATHER BRINGS NEEDS FOR POSLAM

As indispensable as tooth powder and other intimate articles for toilet convenience this Summer is a box of Poslam, the perfect skin remedy.

When Poslam is used for sunburn, fever blisters, mosquito bites, burns, rashes, pimples, hives, red noses and irritated or inflamed skin, surprising results are seen after one application.

The complexion is cleared over night; dandruff is dissolved, itching or chafing is made speedily relieved.

Apart from its primary purposes, the treatment of eczema, acne, skin scale, all forms of itch, etc., the marvelous of Poslam extends to every condition where the skin is affected.

POSLAM SOAP, used daily for toilet and bath, makes every cleansing operation a double means of healthfulness to the skin. Incomparable in its benefits to tender skin, particularly to infants. Antiseptic and soothing; absolutely pure. All Riker-Jaynes drug stores, Houghton Dutton drug dept., and all druggists sell Poslam (price 50 cents) and Poslam Soap (price 25 cents). For free samples, write to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West 25th street, New York City.

The Smiling Beauty

By Hazel Dawn

AN OBJECT LESSON FOR THE GIRL WHO CAN SMILE PRETTILY BUT WON'T

Miss Hazel Dawn, the original "Pink Lady," and member of Florenz Ziegfeld's coterie of famous beauties, is shown here in various poses that aptly serve to show the value of a pretty smile.

By HAZEL DAWN.

I HAVE been asked to give my particular secret for beauty to the readers of this paper.

I don't believe that I have any especial formula for beauty, but if I were to sum up in a word the quality which to me is the greatest beautifier of the human face, I should call it happiness.

Happiness expresses itself in laughter, and to me the laughing face is the prettiest of all.

I have always cultivated a sense of humor and done my hair up in a simple way, and whatever good looks I have, have been enhanced by both characteristics.

I have seen many girls who ought to be pretty, and whose natural expression was glum and depressed, or who had overtopped their small faces with masses of false hair, handsaw and ornaments until they were anything but attractive.

I think your face expresses your habitual and characteristic train of thought. You can't have a disagreeable, unlovely disposition and expect to look like Lillian Russell, who is just as amiable as she looks to be. On the other hand, even if you haven't classic features and a Cupid's bow mouth, if you radiate good humor and affection, these qualities will shine in your face, and no matter what kind of a complexion you have, or how straight your hair may be, some people in the world are bound to think you are a dear, and a few will think you beautiful to look at.

So my advice to the girl who wants to be beautiful is to laugh and be merry.

A Great Tonic

Laughter is the greatest tonic in the world, the greatest natural beautifier. I am always glad to hear the audience laugh, not only because I know that they appreciate the work of the actors on the stage, but because it is so good for them. Worry makes one old, laughter rejuvenates.

Laughter is just as good an exercise as deep breathing, and you'll never find a person with a hearty, ringing laugh, constantly laughing at something or other, who hasn't a pretty good pair of lungs. If you want to be pretty, be an optimist.

If you want to be a stage success, be an optimist, and if you want to succeed in the career of a home-maker, be a double-dyed optimist and cultivate a laugh.

We can't all be Mark Tapleys, but a good many of us can cultivate his optimistic point of view. That is certainly one thing the stage will do for you. A stage career is full of ups and downs of worries and petty irritations no matter how successful one may be. Now if one is going to be temperamental and let everything worry one, when the curtain rings up in the evening there is no vitality left with which to give a good performance for which the audience had paid admission.

So the stage is her and by begins to take things more easily and neither one night stands nor bad food can ruffle her spirits. She refuses to be annoyed, and if she is upset or nervous she is sufficient of an actress in every day life not to show it, but to assume the happy expression for which she is celebrated, and which is one of her business assets.

Women who laugh a great deal stay young longer than those whose faces are sad, severe or even merely earnest. The severe expression tends to lengthen the face, and it always pulls the corners of the mouth down. These long lines are the lines of tragedy and age. The mouth that turns up is the mouth of youth and comedy. No woman needs to grow to old middle aged with those deep lines at the lower corners of the mouth. Those lines come because one is too severe or has worried too much, or even been a little cross, when with a well developed sense of humor and a little will power one could have turned those self-same drooping corners upward.

Not Worth While

Have you ever caught a glimpse of yourself suddenly when you were walking by, deep in thought, and looked up to see your reflection in the shop's mirror? Have you realized how severe, cross and anxious you looked? Do you know that because you couldn't match a sample of ribbon your face took on the annoyed expression of an elderly cross-grained Prima Minister?

Is it worth while to make ugly lines in ones face just for trivial things as we women are constantly doing?

The dressmaker disappoints us, and we frown a whole day. Now by developing a sense of humor you learn that it is the nature of dressmakers to disappoint, and you avoid this trial by ordering your frock a long time in advance.

A sense of humor does a great deal toward helping one to be charitable to one's neighbor, and I think that charitableness and kindliness are reflected in the face sooner than any other thoughts. The skin may be disfigured with scars or marks, but if the spirit behind the face is a kindly one people are bound to see a certain beauty shining to express itself.

When I said I believed in a sense of humor as a particular beautifier I also added that I always did my hair plain. You will seldom find a girl with a real sense of humor and a good looking figure who will make a ridiculous object of herself by displaying hairdressers' goods bought by the pound and inserting artificial to her hair.

If nature has been very stingy with you and only given you a couple of hairs, I think any woman is justified in supplementing the deficiency, but I have seen so many girls with really nice hair cover up their own tresses with importations from Canada, whose the coarse long hair comes from, that I wonder if they have any idea how ridiculous they look.

For stage purposes it is often necessary to wear artificial hair, because the effect from the stage is quite different from real life. That is why one is forced to paint and make up because the strong electric light makes even the healthiest complexion look ghastly. A few soft natural curls on the forehead wouldn't be seen from the back row of the orchestra, so border artificial curls are often used, but the girl who thinks that she is beautifying herself by adopting these artifices and bringing them into the light of day is very much mistaken.

She shows that she lacks a sense of proportion and a sense of humor. The latter saves one from many a foolish mistake which the seeker after beauty is likely to make.

Nothing better. Besides it's always healthful.

A delicious combination of ginger, aromatics and French brandy. Look for the Owl Trade Mark on the wrapper. Don't you get a counterfeits or dangerous substitute. Forty years the standard of purity, flavor and strength. Sold by all druggists and grocers.

FRECKLES

New Drug That Quickly Removes These Homely Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as your druggist, Stillman's Freckle Cream has been improved. Just procure an ounce of othine—double strength, from Hegeler & Zeller Drug Co., Stillman's Drug Co., and apply a little of it at night and in the morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and get a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

To stop a headache in one minute put 25 cents worth of powdered borlish and apply externally.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

O Gee, it is hot. I sed wen I calm home the other nite. I have never saw it so hot. Mr & Major Youngs went in swimming in the harbor & it felt so good that we almost had a nochun to swim a mile.

How often have I told you two kids not to go in swimming, sed Pa. There are a lot of other ways to keep cool.

I know there are, I sed to Pa, but there aint many ways for a kid to keep cool. Kids cant join any of them indoor yacht clubs, like all you men do, I told Pa. There is a lot of electric fans in this world, I sed to Pa, but most all of them is in places ware a kid cant go. You go on & set under yure electric fans, I tound Pa, & me & Major Youngs will go in swimming.

I never heard you talk back to me like that, sed Pa. What in the world has got into you?

Nothing, I sed to Pa but I think that all kids ought to go in swimming all they want to & I am going out into the country next week, too, with Major Youngs, I sed.

You know who he means, sed Ma to Pa, he means that litiel boy that is his chum. You didnot think Bobbie was going to join the army, did you

No, sed Pa, but I dount think boys shud go roaming around, swimming in the harbor & doing out into the country without there parents knowing something about it. You can bet yure life, I sed, that wen I was a child I never swam in any harbor.

Of course you didnot, sed Ma you swam a measly litiel creek that ran thru Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, & at that you cairn pritty near drowning. You let Bobbie & his litiel friend alone.

I suppose I will have to if you say so, sed Pa, but it gets serener all the time to have kids romping around in dangerous places. Then Ma had Pa hooked, I cud see that much. She went rite over to the library tabel & she picked up a magazine, wich had a artikel in it, wich Pa had read the naim of the artikel was Running Wild. Then Ma read this, wich Pa had red

Roaming wild. How excitedly, how grand. The smel of the woods, the swamps, the streams. The twitter of birds that sing in the far places, ware few white men has ever sat there bare feet & bare the condor looks down from its ten thou sand-feet high cliff, soaring now & then into the wild stormy air above the raging sea.

Roaming wild. Think what that means think of the jungles, the Grate North west, the African desert with its burning sands & all the strange, queer places of the earth.

Then Ma began to laff. You must have been kind of strange & queer yureself wen you rote that artikel, sed Ma, & then you have the nerve to ask Hotel Bobbie & his boy frends to keep out of the harbor. Go to bed & smoar, sed Ma to Pa.

Married Life the Third Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

HELEN opened the door, gave a quick, shuddering glance around the hotel room, then threw herself across the foot of the bed.

She was ill—tremblingly, quiveringly ill. Hot and cold flashes were sweeping over her.

It had come upon her suddenly while she was going through the British Museum. How she got back to the hotel she did not know. There was a dazed recollection of asking a policeman what bus to take, and of the ride back, which seemed endless—but nothing was clear.

And now she lay there too weak to even take off her things. What was it? Was she going to be very ill?

If only she could reach Warren! She was terrified at the thought of being there alone until 6—the time they had arranged to meet. But there was no way she could get him by 'phone.

With a determined effort she arose, got out of her clothes and into a loose dressing gown, but she was so dizzy she could hardly stand.

Oh, how good it felt to slip in between the cool fresh sheets, for now she was burning with fever. In a moment her hot face had warmed the pillow, and she moved her head for a cooler spot.

She had intended to ring for the maid while she was up, and now she lay looking at the bell, dreading the effort it would take to reach it. Her whole body seemed to shrink from motion, she wanted only to lie still.

When once more she finally forced herself out of bed and over to the bell, she crept back again with a wave of nausea surging through her, while the whole room seemed to sway.

The maid came, a typical English maid with white cap and rosy complexion. With quick sympathy she asked if Madame was ill.

Helen sent her for some ice water—"with ice in it." For the lukewarm water the English drank always sickened her.

Never had the clinking of ice against a pitcher sounded so grateful. The maid put the water on a stand by the bed and Helen drank eagerly a large glassful.

Warren Arrives

"Perhaps Madame has had a chill," she suggested, when Helen told her of the hot and cold flashes and the cold perspiration.

A chill! Strange that she had not thought of that. Unquestionably it had been a chill. But it was more than that now, for she was conscious of a sore throat and of a curious ache in every limb.

"Would Madame like to see a doctor?" Helen hesitated. She knew nothing of the English doctors, and ill as she was, she had visions of enormous bills.

"No, I think I'll wait till my husband comes—he'll be here at six."

"If you'll take a little brandy, ma'am," ventured the maid. "That's always good for a chill."

"There's a flask of brandy in Mr. Curtis' satchel—the one over there on the chair. I don't think it's locked."

When the maid had gone she lay back with closed eyes. The brandy was tingling through her, bringing a delicious sense of drowsiness. Her thoughts grew confused in a few moments she was asleep.

"Hello there! What's all this?"

She awoke with a start to find Warren standing beside the bed. For a moment she was too dazed to speak. Then she murmured a vague:

"O, dear, I'm so sick!"

"Eh? What's the trouble?"

"I'm afraid I've had a chill."

"Chill! Nonsense! Something you've eaten has upset you."

"Then, Warren, I've a fever now. Just feel how hot my face is."

Helen was not one of the many women who exaggerate and take advantage of every sight illness that they may receive sympathy and attention from their husbands. Yet she was now conscious of a thrill of something like satisfaction when Warren felt her forehead and found it so feverish that the cure indifference of his manner was somewhat modified.

"Yes, you are a little feverish," he admitted. "You've taken cold, that's all. It's this confounded climate. Upsets anybody. Don't feel well today myself."

A Disappointment

It was one of Warren's characteristics that whenever Helen felt badly he would always make some remark about not being well himself.

He had not kissed her since he entered and now he put up a tremulous hand to brush back his head.

"Oh, I'm all dusty," drawled back. "This London grime cuts into your skin. Let me get washed up."

"Guess you don't feel like going out to dinner."

"Uh, Warren!" She could not keep the reproach out of her tone.

"Well, I'm not asking you to. Needn't put on such an injured air. What do you want sent up here?"

In a rush it came to Helen that she was to be left alone again—that he was to send up her dinner and go out for his.

"Dear, can't you have your dinner sent up, too?"

"Certainly not. I couldn't eat up here. Now, for heaven's sake, don't get fussy just because you're a little upset. I'll send up some chicken—h. What else?"

"I don't think I can eat anything," tremulously turning away.

"Course you can. A little broth'll be good for you. I won't be gone long. Just going to some chop house near here."

He stooped over and kissed her hurried.

"Now don't think you're going to be sick. It's only this beastly climate. Most Americans get a touch of it."

When the door closed after him Helen lay staring at the wallpaper. Usually her love so blinded her that she did not offer to dislike Warren's utter selfishness, but tonight it seemed forced upon her.

How could he leave her alone, when he could so easily have had his dinner sent up? What if she should be seriously ill over here? It was not the illness that she thought of with such terror, but the fear of learning to what extreme Warren's selfishness and indifference might go. She must not be ill—she must not put him to that test.

A little later there was a knock at the door, and a waiter entered with a tray and placed it on the bed beside her. There was a bowl of chicken broth, rolls buttered toast and some crisp fresh romaine salad.

At last, Warren had remembered that she loved romaine. It was an absurdly little thing to offset the deep ache of selfishness, yet it brought a faint glow of pleasure.

But she could not eat. Just the exertion of resting on her elbow to get at the tray made her dizzy.

When Warren returned he frowned at the untouched tray.

"That's no way to do. You've got to eat to keep up your strength."

"Dear, I couldn't!" appallingly stretching out her hand on the coverlet with the hope that he might take it and sit down beside her.

"You haven't tried," ignoring her hand. "Now, see if you can't take some of that broth. Wait, I'll fix that pillow at your back. By George, these English pillows are heavy and hard as bricks. Thought you were going to have the maid take off those bolsters?"

"I did tell her, dear, but I guess she forgot."

"Huh, she didn't want to take it off. She's always made her beds with a big soapy bolster and two big soggy pillows, and she's not going to change. That's the English of it."

He jerked off the bolster so roughly that the whole bed shook and the bowl of broth sloshed out on the tray cloth.

"There now," adjusting the two remaining pillows at Helen back.

Obediently she sipped at the broth, then pushed it aside with a faint "Dear, I CAN'T! My throat's too sore!"

"Throat sore? Why's that?" His tone implied that she had wilfully chosen to have a sore throat.

Alone Again

"It's been sore all afternoon. You don't think I can be getting tonsilitis? Doesn't that start with a chill?"

"Tonsilitis huh! Wonder you don't say diphtheria. You get a touch of cold and think you've something serious. Here, I'll ring for the waiter to take this tray, and distant church tower.

Do You Know That—

The lottery for a wife, which takes place annually at Sandomsk, has been successful this year, all the tickets having been bought. The promoters of the lottery select the young woman who has to be drawn for. She is then ordered to remain constantly at home for ten days to receive the visits of candidates for her hand. The sale of 5,000 tickets at a rouble each is controlled by the Municipal Council. As soon as they are sold the lottery takes place, and the winner has the right to marry the young woman and her fortune of 5,000 roubles. She can, however, refuse the man who has drawn the lucky number. In this case she has to divide her fortune with him. Since the lotteries were established refusals have been rare.

Teas for poodles, which originated among the smart set of Palm Beach, Fla., have apparently appealed to other centres of fashion. A Chicago message states that Miss Georgiana Williams, a society debutante, gave a birthday tea in honor of her pet French poodle, Bunny. Miss Williams' younger sister and Miss Gertrude Pardee assisted. The dogs of the smart set had baths and were powdered and perfumed, and those that did not go to the Williams home in automobiles made the journey afoot. A tempting menu was served to the pets on rose-wood. All the good doggies were served by ladies.

To celebrate the marriage of his two sons and a daughter, a rich Hungarian landed proprietor at Ferencsek has given a sumptuous banquet. The banquet was continued for three nights, and during that time there were consumed 1,134 bottles of wine, seventeen of rum, twelve of eau de vie de prunes, 440 pounds of beef, 220 pounds of pork, 150 fowls and ducks, and 500 eggs.

Lanarkshire, with its population of 1,447,113 persons, contains more people than any other Scottish county.

"The electric needle is a painful and expensive process for removing superfluous hair, and the same result can be easily and speedily achieved by applying delatone. Mix a little delatone with water; enough to bring with this paste; let it remain two minutes; then wash the skin and the hairs will be gone.

"To make thin, short eyelashes grow in long, thick and silky with a beautiful curl, apply plain pyrozin to the lash roots with thumb and forefinger. Applying pyrozin to straggly eyebrows will make them long and silky.

"A splendid protection against tan, freckles and sunburn is a solution made by dissolving an original package of mayatone in a half-pint witch hazel. Gently rub over the face in the morning and all day your skin will be clear, soft and satiny—with no streaky discoloration. It will not rub off nor show like powder.

"Dry shampooing makes the hair bright, fluffy and clean—full of life and lustre. Put four ounces of powdered orris root in a fruit jar and mix it well with an original package of therox. Sprinkle a teaspoonful of the mixture on the head and brush it out thoroughly. This treatment requires only a few minutes and evening dampness will not affect your hair."

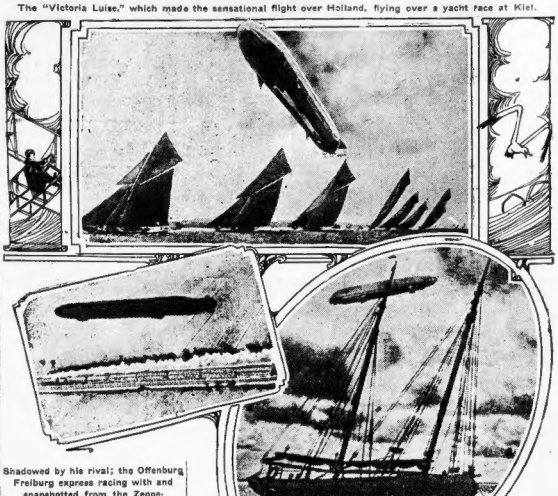
WONDERFUL PHOTOGRAPHS OF GERMAN DIRIGIBLES IN ACTION

The "Victoria Luise," which made the sensational flight over Holland, flying over a yacht race at Kiel.



Shadowed by his rival; the Offenburg Freiburg express racing with and enapahotted from the Zeppelin airship "Schwaben."

THE three-hundred-and-fifty-mile flight across Holland made by the German airship "Victoria Luise" under military conditions, has brought to the public notice the fact that, both in France and in Germany there are at the present moment large fleets of these scouts of the air. As to the danger to public buildings and arsenals from these aerial monsters there is a great deal of doubt, but as to their utility in carrying out a reconnaissance, either at sea or on land; there cannot be two opinions. There are three types of German airships, of which about twelve are in commission—namely, the Zeppelin rigid, the Parseval non-rigid, and the Siemens-Schuckert semi-rigid. The "Schwaben," whose shadow is shown in the photograph given above, is what may be called a super-Zeppelin. The most modern of the German airships are capable of forty-five miles an hour in a calm, and twenty-five miles against a thirty-five-mile-an-hour wind.

MORE KIN DECISIONS

By FRANCES I. GARSIDE.

KIN COMMISSIONER LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON has in time settled every kin question that has come before him save this:

What proportion of a man's salary should a man spend on his kin in order to be just and generous, and what proportion should be save to meet the uncertainties of the future?

The Kin Commissioner has made many decisions on this question, but none that will stand. If he ever resigns from the important position he holds, it will be because of this troublesome question.

In the last few days, with the aid of an ice pack on his head and a game of solitaire between decisions to quiet his nerves, he has handed down the following decisions:

When a man and his wife disagree, he is the government, and she is the revolutionist. (Note: This decision may be reversed when Mrs. Appleton comes home.)

When there is a funeral the poor kin are to have their rightful places in the family circle.

Every man's relatives should live so far away that he feels like putting on a clean shirt when he goes to see them.

When a man goes on a long, long journey to attend the funeral of a kin, it is certain the kin left something besides mourners, and he is on his way to get his.

When kin talk of the family skeleton, they mean some alive flesh and blood person, so much alive they have scant hopes he will soon be a skeleton.

When Daughter arranges the photographs on the parlor table, she puts the pictures of the wealthy kin in front. It is an older member of the family who timidly shifts to the front the picture of the kin who are kindest.

When there is sickness, the discovery is made that the kin who are less decorative in a reception line, or as a rule, know most about making mustard poultices.

The first thing a child learns after patty-cake is that Mother's kin are superior to Father's.

The unfair trick of killing the fatted calf for the prodigal causes more rows among kin than anything else on earth, except the division of Father's money.

When a woman gets a letter from her kin, her husband is betting on a sure thing, if he bets, that her kin are coming.

The penalty of becoming a man's best friend is that he expects you to take his side in a kin row.

When a kin of the wife goes home, the husband is justified in asking her what she is taking back in her trunk.

Presents from wealthy kin should be exhibited in the parlor; those from the poor in should be distributed where they are in a conspicuous.

The average period of waiting before a widows' remarries is two years after his wife's death. However, widowers are doing their best to cut this average down.

A girl spends 87½2 better chances for matrimony if she will have engraved in parentheses after her name on her visiting cards these words: "No Kin."

"WHATEVER could have come to my master to do such a thing," groaned Thompson, turning to reach the door.

"Come back," cried Bruce sharply. "Now look here, Thompson," he went on, placing both his hands on the latter's shoulders and looking him straight in the eye, "it is imperative that you should pull yourself together. That sort of remark will never do. Sir Charles has simply taken an overdose of chloral accidentally. He has slept badly ever since Lady Dyke's death, you understand, and has been in the habit of taking sleeping draughts. Now before you leave the room, tell me exactly what has happened, in your own language."

"I can't put it together now, sir, but I won't say anything to anybody. You can trust me for that. Why, I loved him as my own son, I did."

"Yes, I know that well. But remember. An overdose. An accident. Nothing else. Do you follow me?"

"Quite so, sir. Heaven help us all."

"An Accident"

"Very well. Now send for the doctor, without needlessly alarming the other servants."

Bruce placed the envelope in the pocket of his overcoat, saying to the detective:

"We will examine this later, White. Just now we must do what we can to avoid a scandal. The case between Lady Dyke and her husband will be settled by a higher tribunal than we had counted upon."

"It certainly looks like an accident, Mr. Bruce," was the answer, "but it all depends upon the view the doctor takes. And you know, of course, that I shall have to report the actual facts to my superiors."

"That is obvious. Yet no harm is done at this early stage in taking such steps as may possibly render undue publicity needless. It may be impossible but, on the other hand, until we have heard Sir Charles' version, contained, I suppose, in this letter to me, it is advisable to sustain the theory of an accidental death."

"Anything I can do to help you will be done," replied the detective. With that they dropped the subject, and more carefully scrutinized the room.

To all intents and purposes Sir Charles Dyke might, indeed, have brought about the catastrophe inadvertently. The sleeping draught bore the ledger number of its prescription, and there is nothing unusual in a patient striving to help the cautious dose ordered by a physician by the addition of a more powerful nostrum.

His partly dressed state, too, argued that he had taken the fatal mixture at a time when he contemplated retiring to rest for the night. Are still barred in the grim, tin the municipiere—in a position where the inquest must see it until the moment when all things faded from his vision—was a beautiful miniature of his wife.

The detective, with professional nonchalance, soon sat down. There was nothing to do but await the arrival of the doctor, and, having heard his report, go home.

In the quietude of the room, with the strain relaxed, Bruce was profoundly moved by the spectacle of his dead friend. Whatever his logical faculties might argue, he could not regard this man as a murderer. If Lady Dyke met her death at his hand then it must have been the result of some terrible mistake—of some momentary outburst of passion which never contemplated such sequel.

Poisons which kill by stupefaction do not distort their victims as in easy whose violent irritants are used. Sir Charles Dyke seemed to lire in a deep sleep, exhausted by toil, or by the sense of comfort felt of death—while the bright colors and speaking eyes of the miniature counterfeited life. Standing between these two —both the mere images of the men and the women he had known so well—the barrister inexorably felt that at last they had peace.

It was his first experience of the tremendous change in the relationship established by death. It utterly overpowered him. No mere words could express his emotions. Between him and those that had been was imposed the impenetrable wall of eternity.

A bustle in the hall beneath aroused him from his grief-stricken stupor, and Mr. White's commonplace tones sounded strange in his ears.

"Here's the doctor."

A well-known physician hastened to the room. Thompson had carefully followed instructions. The doctor was not prepared for the condition of affairs that a glance revealed to his practised eye.

"Surely he is not dead?" he cried, looking from the form in the chair to the two men.

His Name Cleared

Bruce answered him:

"Yes, for some hours, I fear, but we wanted to avoid spreading unnecessary rumors until——"

"I understand. My poor friend! How came this to happen?"

The skilled practitioner merely lifted one of the dead man's eyelids, and then turned to examine the bottles on the table.

"My own prescription," he said, after tasting the contents of one phial. "Ah, this was bad; why did he not consult me?" and he sadly shook his head as he tasted the remaining liquid in the second.

"What do you make of it?" said Bruce.

He looked the other steadily in the face and the doctor interpreted the cause of his anxiety.

"A clear case of accidental poisoning, he replied. "Sir Charles has consulted me several times during the past week on account of his extreme insomnia. I specifically warned him against overdoing my treatment. Change of air, exercise, and diet are the true specifics for sleeplessness, especially when induced, as his was, by a morbid state of mind."

"You mean——"

"That Sir Charles has never recovered from the shock of his wife's death. I did not know it myself until it was announced recently, and I gathered from him that the manner of her demise was partly unaccounted for. Altogether, it is a sad business that such a couple should be taken in such a manner."

Mr. Walle was industriously taking notes the while, and the doctor regarded him with a questioning look.

"This gentleman is in the police," explained Bruce.

"Indeed!"

"Yes. We came here by mere accident. Mr. White and I were engaged in an important inquiry—the cause of Lady Dyke's disappearance, in fact—and we hurried here at a late hour to consult with Sir Charles. Hence our presence and this discovery."

"How strange!"

"There is no reason now," broke in the detective, "why the body should not be moved."

Claude shuddered at the phrase. It suggested the mortuary.

"Not in the least. I am quite satisfied as to the cause of death."

The dispatch of telegrams and other necessary details kept Bruce busily employed till 2 o'clock. Not until he reached the privacy of his own library was he able to break the seal of the packet left for him as the final act and word of the late Sir Charles Dyke.

How Lady Dyke Disappeared

(Being the Manuscript left by Sir Charles Dyke, Bart., and addressed to Claude Bruce, Esq., Barrister-at-law.)

IF, in customary, I believe, for poor wretches who are sentenced to undergo the last punishment of the law to be allowed a three weeks' respite between the date of their sentence and that on which they are executed. I am in the position of such a one. The difference between me and the convicted felon lies merely in environment in most respects I am worse situated than he. My period of agony is longer drawn out. I am condemned to die by my own hand, I am mocked by the surroundings of luxury, haunted by the knowledge that though life and even a sort of happiness are within my reach I must not avail myself of them.

There may come a time in the affairs of any man when he is compelled to choose between a dishonored existence and voluntary death. These unpleasant alternatives are now before me. You, who know me, would never doubt which of them I should adopt, nor will you upbraid me because our judgments coincide. There is nothing for it, Bruce, but quiet death —death in the least obtrusive form, and so disposed that it may be possible for you, chief among my friends and the only person I can trust to fulfill my wishes, to arrange that my memory may be speedily forgotten. My virtues, I fear, will not secure me immortality; my faults, I hope, will not be spread broadcast to cram the maws of the gaping crowd.

I do not shirk this final issue, nor do I crave pity. In setting forth plainly the history of my wife's death and its result, I am actuated solely by a desire to protect others from needless suspicion. Having resolved to pay forfeit for my own errors, I claim to have explated them. This document is an explanation, not a confession.

I have not much time left wherein fittingly to shape my story so as to be just to all, myself included. If I am not mistaken, the officers of the law are in hot chase of me, but my statement shall not be made to an earthly judge. The words of a man about to die may not be well chosen; they should at least be true. I will tell of events as nearly as possible in their sequence of time. If I leave gaps through haste or forgetfulness you will, from your own knowledge of the facts, readily fill them up once you are in possession of the salient features.

Mesmgnore and his sister were the friends of my early years. We played together as children. Gwendoline Mesmgnore was two years younger than I, and I well remember making love to her at the age of eleven. Her mother died when she was quite a baby, and her father married again, so her stepbrother Albert is her junior by four years. I taught him how to ride and swim and play cricket. My father's place in Surrey—we did not acquire the Yorkshire property until the death of my grandfather—adjoined the estate General Mesmgnore occupied after his retirement from the army,

HOW TO ACQUIRE HEALTH AND BEAUTY

SICKLY, "ALL-GONE" FEELING—A splendid tonic and stomach-lifter can be made at home for a small sum by putting 1 ounce kardene in ½ pint alcohol, then to this adding ½ cupful sugar and enough hot water to make a quart. Take a tablespoonful regularly before each meal and it will quickly and gently eliminate the poisons, repair waste tissue, build up the worn parts and give to you full strength and energy. This kardene tonic is unequalled for ridding the skin of pimples, blotches and sallowness. Frail, thin people will find it excellent to build up flesh right in summer time.

THIS BANISHES HAIRS—A quick, effective and harmless method of removing hair or fuzz is to make sufficient paste with powdered delatone and water to cover the hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair will have vanished. Delatone will not injure the skin.

WHEN THE SCALP ITCHES—Into ½ pint alcohol put 1 ounce capudine, then add ½ pint water, and you will have the very best hair and scalp-tonic at little cost. This quinozin tonic is soothing to tender, irritated scalps and it dissolves all dandruff and excess oil, leaving it healthy and clean. Use together use of this tonic restores the former color and glint to faded, dull hair and induces a luxuriant growth of long and silken.

HOME-MADE EYE TONIC—In 1 pint cold, clear water dissolve 1 ounce eyebon and you will have a refreshing and valuable eye-tonic. Bathe eyelids in this to remove fatigue, prevent inflammation and to clear the eyes. Used before retiring it is good for tired, aching eyes. Two drops in each eye relieve the smart and ache caused by tired muscles, and very often the cross, sick-looking eyes assume health and sparkle.

HOME-MADE SKIN-FOOD—Into a pint bowl of cold water squeeze the juice of two lemons and 1 ounce glycerine. Let remain over night, then apply to skin and rub lightly until dry. This inexpensive, home-made cream-jelly is ideal for removing tan, sunburn and freckles. With it you can eliminate wrinkles, round out hollows and improve the general unhealthy condition of the skin and have a complexion with a youthful tint and softness truly charming.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

The transcontinental Alco truck of Charles W. Young & Co. of Philadelphia has passed the finance test and is now on the continent sign" at Kearney, Neb. At that point it has covered 1,773 miles, or 240 miles more than the distance by the air line route.

From the latest telegraphic information the truck has reached Sutherland, Neb., close to the western border of the State, bringing the mileage up to 2,112 miles. The crew had a five-hour fight to get through a sad stretch of sand at O'Fallons and found it necessary to build their own roads with planks. With the exception of this experience there have been no other delays from bad roads along the Platte Valley route.

The trucks good roads boosters visited with the public officials by sending on an advance guard to install the coming of the truck. The crew are guests also of the Platte Valley Transcontinental Route Boosters Association.

Charles A. Maller, the Universal truck representative in Boston announces that his company has secured the big service station formerly occupied by the Atlantic sweep truck at No. 103 Pleasant street. This location is easily one of the best appointed truck stations in the city.

Manager Maller will make his headquarters there. He also announces that H. L. Wilcox, familiarly known as "Bud," who has been salesmanager of the Federal truck has assumed the position of sales manager for the Universal truck.

C. F. Redden, salesmanager of the Everett car in New York and New England, is visiting the J. S. Harrington Company of Toledo. Mr. Wilys is now in charge of the Garford plant. For the next year the Wilys-Garford Sales Company has controlled the Elyria, but the making of the car has been in the Garford Company. The capital of the Garford company is $2,000,000, of which $1,500,000 is common. This latter amount represents Mr. Wilys' purchase.

As the selling arrangement between the Wilys-Garford Sales Company and the Wilys-Overland Company does not terminate until August 1, President Wilys will act only as general manager, after which a reorganization will take place with Mr. Garford and Mr. Partners with Mr. Wilys and a new set of officials.

This purchase of the Garford and the recent purchase of the Gramm Company of Lima, O., gives the Wilys Company a complete line of pleasure cars and trucks to be procured.

The Panama Canal Is Ours, Not England's

The English government protests against our using the Panama Canal as if we really owned it. There is an English theory that Americans have no more rights in the canal than the English have.

They point to a musty document and say to the American people: "See, you have forfeited your ownership of the gigantic labor of your hands. You have paid the enormous tolls of sweat and blood, but the canal belongs to anybody and everybody as much as it does to you. And whatever other tolls remain to be paid for the upkeep of the great waterway you must pay, cent for cent and farthing for farthing—with us English and all the rest of the world, who have stood by at ease and watched your herculean labor and gigantic expense at the Isthmus."

Certainly, if there is anything on earth more colossal than the Panama Canal it is this impudence. The London Daily Mail said Monday:

> It is impossible to see on what grounds of law or ethics the United States Senate can defend the proposal to grant free tolls to American ships passing through the canal. The United States may claim the right, exercised by other nations, of subsidizing its merchant service, but a general subsidy is not the same thing as a special refund of tolls paid for passages through a canal in which the ships of all nations have equal rights; nor is it practicable, without injustice, to exempt coastwise traffic, which under the navigation laws of the United States is already reserved exclusively for American ships.

This statement is typical. The English press is unanimously supporting the protests made by the English government, and—as always happens when questions of American rights are involved—not a few Tory New York newspapers aid Great Britain and adopt her view. They not only deny our right to let American transoceanic ships go toll-free, through the canal, but even our right to pay the tolls out of our public purse—and also our right to refrain from laying an embargo upon our own domestic commerce!

The simple truth is, of course, that the Panama Canal is American property. We have bought it at a great price, and paid for it. In the use of it we are under moral as well as treaty obligations to treat all foreign nations alike and to fix equitable tolls.

The Senate has announced that it will consider Panama legislation this week. The Senate will, of course, treat the protest of the British government in the matter of Panama tolls with such politeness as is due to a formal communication from any friendly government on any subject.

But the American people will have no patience with the contention that we are precluded by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty from letting our ships go toll-free through the canal—if we want to do that. To the American people this whole agitation can hardly seem to be anything else but a stupendous British "bluff." It recalls to mind the spectacular effort that the English made when the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was pending to get into that document a formal renunciation of our right to fortify the canal.

It will be remembered that that earlier gust of British bluster was met and silenced by a storm of American indignation raised by the agencies of publicity which the AMERICAN represents. It was the Hearst newspapers alone that aroused the people—and through the people compelled the Senate to see the pusillanimous character of the proposal that the Panama Canal should be built at an expense of $300,000,000 and then left without defence. The AMERICAN again feels itself impelled to voice the rights of the American people against an amazing assumption of the British government. We have no doubt that the patriotism of the Senate will make the same response in this case that it did when it compelled Secretary Hay to change the treaty to which he had already agreed.

From the moment that our government took steps to fortify the canal it was settled that we could not entertain any question as to our right to defend our proprietary rights there—and to levy such tolls as we please.

In effect, the position taken by our government is as follows:

First, that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty—when it says that the canal shall be "free and open to the vessels of commerce and of war of all nations on terms of entire equality"—means substantially what an innkeeper would mean if he agreed that his house should be open to all comers on equal terms. He would NOT mean that he himself had no special rights in his own house. By the same token, it is to be observed that every interstate railroad which is now legally bound under the law to carry passengers and freight without preference or discrimination is not precluded from carrying its own employes and supplies free of charge—and is forbidden to carry other traffic free of charge.

Second, if the treaty had any other meaning than this, when there was question of a canal through the foreign State of Nicaraugua, that other meaning certainly cannot apply to the present canal—since it runs through our own domestic territories, and is, therefore, to all practical intents, an inland waterway, as truly as the Hudson River or the Mississippi.

To Theodore Roosevelt, more than to any other man, is due the gratitude of the nation for the freeing of the canal from all foreign entanglements. It was his courageous action in cutting a tangle of diplomatic red tape that brought about the acquisition of the canal zone and made the American title to the canal forever incontestible. President Roosevelt deserves the undying gratitude of his countrymen for this prodigious achievement. By his own acts alone and solely on his own responsibility he acquired the Panama zone for the United States and made the canal possible, just as President Jefferson made possible the Louisiana purchase.

The pretensions of the British government are divested of even a specious semblance of cogency—because the canal runs through our own land.

The logical position of our government is that if Great Britain insists that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty ties our hands, then we will put an end to that treaty.

There is no canon of the law or comity of nations that can prevent our abrogating a compact that has ceased to serve a mutually useful purpose. And as between the denunciation of the old treaty and the cancellation of our ownership of the canal the nation should not hesitate a moment.

Desperate Desmond and 3 Friends

1—IN DIRE PERIL. Rosamond Election is in danger. Desperate Desmond Prohibition, believing that he has shaken off the three heroes, heads his sea-going water wagon straight for the girl.

2—THE WATCHERS. But Heroes Taft and Wilson spot Prohib's plan.

3—DRIFTWOOD. Prohib thinks he is nearing land, as he sees branches floating in the water.

4—OUR OLD CHUM. Ha! The branches were the horns of the Bull Moose! 'Tis a ruse of our old hero, Teddy.

5—FRIENDS? Hero Roosevelt is honeyfugling Prohib. They seem to be pals. It bodes ill for Claude Wilson and Claude Taft.

6—ON THE ALERT. Claude Wilson has observed the water wagon with its precious burden of Rosamond Election. He prepares to nail Prohib and Hero Roosevelt, who sits beside him. Details of the duel tomorrow.

The Gossip

A ROSE in my garden, the sweetest and fairest,
Was hanging her head through the long golden hours,
And early one morning I saw her tears falling,
And heard a low, gossiping talk in the bowers.

The yellow Nasturtium, a spinster all faded,
Was telling a Lily what ailed the poor Rose:
"That wild roving Bee, who was hanging about her
Has jilted her squarely, as everyone knows.

"I knew when he came, with his singing and sighing,
His airs and his speeches, so fine and so sweet,
Just how it would end; but none would believe me,
For all were quite ready to fall at his feet."

"Indeed, you are wrong," said the Lilybelle, proudly,
"I cared nothing for him. He called on me once,
And would have come often, no doubt, if I'd asked him,
But, though he was handsome, I thought him a dunce."

"Now, now, that's not true," cried the tall Oleander,
"He has traveled and seen every flower that grows;
And one who has supped in the garden of princes,
We all might have known, would not wed with the rose."

"But wasn't she proud when he showed her attention?
And she let him caress her," said sly Mignonette.
"And I used to see it and blush for her folly,
The silly thing thinks he will come to her yet.

"I thought he was splendid," said pretty, pert Larkspur,
"So dark and so grand, with that gay cloak of gold;
But he tried, once, to kiss me, the impudent fellow,
And I got offended; I thought him too bold."

"Oh, fie!" laughed the Almond. "That does for a story,
Though I hang down my head, I see all that goes;
And I saw you reach out, trying hard to detain him,
But he just tapped your cheek and flew by to the Rose.

"He cared nothing for her, he only was flirting
To while away time, as everyone knew;
So I turned a cold shoulder to all his advances,
Because I was certain his heart was untrue."

"The Rose it served right for her folly in trusting
An oily tongued stranger," quoth proud Columbine.
"I knew what he was, and thought once I would warn her.
But, of course, the affair was no business of mine."

"Oh, well," cried the Peony, shrugging her shoulders,
"I saw all along that the Bee was a flirt;
But the Rose has been always so praised and so petted,
I thought a good lesson would do her no hurt."

Just then came a sound of a love-song sung sweetly;
I saw my proud Rose lifting up her bowed head;
And the talk of the gossips was hushed in a moment,
And the flowers all listened to hear what was said.

And the dark, handsome Bee, with his cloak o'er his shoulder,
Came swift through the sunlight and kissed the sad Rose.
And whispered: "My darling, I've roved the world over,
And you are the loveliest blossom that grows."

The Bull Moose

By WEX JONES.

THE world is a place of a thousand delights,
A Chock-a-block full of most wonderful sights.
There are wonders of nature and wonders of art
That appeal to the brain and appeal to the heart;
But the sight the most heartfelt emotion induces,
Is a snorting bull moose with his little bull mooses.

It is pleasant to watch the old hen with her chicks
Or the fox teaching cubs what's the latest in tricks,
And cunning to see with what quack!come vim
Young ducklings set out to the pond for a swim;
But away with your hens and your ducks and your geese,
For I love the bull moose with his little bull meese.

Now, all of the animals follow their own,
And puppies will follow a dog with a bone;
And 'tis pleasant to see how the big fellows gambol
And the little ones follow wherever they ramble;
But there's nothing, I vow, that is nearly so nice
As a roaring bull moose with his little bull mice!

FROM all over New England have come words of praise for the first of the "Governors' Editions" of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN. New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island have joined with Maine, the home of its editor, Governor Plaisted, in commendation.

Next Sunday the honors will go to New Hampshire, for the editor will be the Governor of that State, the Hon. Robert P. Bass, but what he has to say will be of interest to every New Englander.

Massachusetts' turn will come Sunday, July 28, when Governor Eugene N. Foss will be the editor. Governor Aram J. Pothier of Rhode Island will be the editor Sunday, August 4, and Governor John A. Mead of Vermont Sunday, August 11.

Better order your paper for next Sunday now. In fact, you will do well to put in your order at once for all the "Governors' editions."
